STARVING CREW RESCUED FROM OVERDUE CRAFT

Coast Guard Destroyer Reaches Schooner Disabled in Gale.

30 MORE SUCCORED IN ANOTHER WRECK

Sailors Taken Off Freighter Pounding to Pieces on California Coast.

Woods Hole, Mass., Nov. 8 (U.P.).—The storm-battered little schooner Arthur S. James, bound for New Bedford with 22 half-starved sailors and Cape Verde Island immigrants aboard, was reached tonight by the Coast Guard destroyer Davis, according to word received at the Coast Guard base here.

The litle schooner, two weeks overdue at New Bedford, had been at the mercy of a northeast gale for the past 48 hours. Its crew and passengers suffered from hunger because food and water had been exhausted in the vessel's 55 days at sea. Its sails were in tatters and its steering gear either useless or gone.

The James was found by the Coast Guard destroyer 100 miles south of Marthas Vineyard. Those aboard snatched ravenously at bread brought aboard by their saviors, the Davis said, in a radio message received here.

Unable to Cook Food.

The speedy Davis was dispatched to the rescue today on receipt of word that the tanker Denver had sighted the crippled schooner 170 miles due east of New York, its rudder either disabled or carried away. A fisherman reported sighting the James 40 miles off Nantucket Saturday and the Coast Guard destroyer Acushnet sent in search but failed because the northeast gale had carried the schooner off its course. The James had no wireless equipment.

The gale that bowled out of the northeast for two days not only whipped the little two-masted schooner's sails to shreds but brought with it biting cold that added to the privations of the crew of thirteen and nine passengers. There was no fuel aboard when the Davis reached the schooner. A small quantity of soft beef had not been eaten because there was no way of cooking it.

The Davis prepared to tow the James to Block Island Sound where it was asked that another Coast Guard boat relieve it in towing the schooner to New Bedford. Food and fuel were put aboard the schooner.

The James had made the Cape Verde Islands a regular port of call and was engaged in trips to bring natives to this country. It was explained at the Coast Guard base here that such vessels do not usually have the storage space to carry water and supplies for extended trips.

30 Succored From Ship.

San Francisco, Nov. 8 (A.P.).- The crew of 30 of the McCormack freighter, Munleon, which went aground on the jagged shoreline of Point Reyes last night, was rescued this morning by Coast Guardsmen as fog lifted from the wind-lashed seas.

The Munleon, Coast Guardsmen said, would be a total loss. Her holds were filled and a choppy sea washed her decks.

Throughout the night Capt. Otto J. Hengst and First Mate M. Anderson stayed with the ship as long swells rocked the vessel, the sharp rocks tearing deeper into her bottom plates. After tugs from San Francisco had given up hope of pulling her free, they too went aboard the Coast Guard cutter Shawnee and with other members of the crew were brought here.

Except to say that a heavy fog hung over Point Reyes as the Munlson was proceeding toward Portland, Capt Hengst would make no statement concerning the cause of the wreck.

New York G. O. P. Loses Voting Move

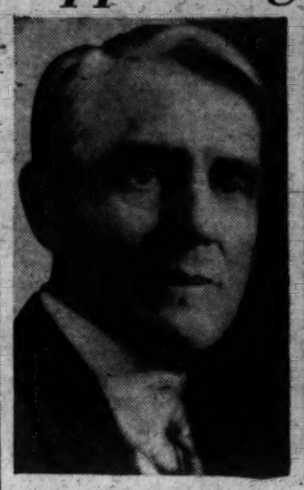
Judge Says That Governor Must Sanction Congress Election.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 8 (A.P.).—The Republican party's effort to procure court sanction of its legislative attempt to realign New York State's congressional districts without the concurrent action of the Democratic governor tonight met a rebuff from the first court to consider the case.

A supreme court justice, himself elected to the bench on a Republican ticket, ruled against the attempt in denying an application of the Republicans for a court order to provide for a congressional election on the basis of the concurrent resolution adopted last spring by the Republican controlled Legislature.

The supreme court justice, Ellis J. Staley, in effect held that a reapportionment of the State's congressional districts could be made only by enactment of a law—passage of a bill by the Legislature accompanied by approval of the governor—and that this had not been done when the Legislature adopted the resolution which was not subject to Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's action.

Capper Sees Midwest Approving Navy Slash



Senator Capper, left, and Representative French, who yesterday defended President Hoover in the controversy over naval charges. Capper described the Midwest as supporting the President's naval appropriations slash.

Senator and French Rap Gardiner Charges and Defend Hoover.

Topeka, Kans., Nov. 8 (A.P.).—The Midwest was described today by Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, as "almost unanimously" approving President Hoover's naval program, which includes an appropriation slash of $61,000,000.

Commenting upon the report of the Hoover-appointed committee which found William Howard Gardiner, president of the Navy League, had uttered "many inaccuracies" in an attack upon the administration's naval policy, Senator Capper said, "The President has no desire to cripple the Navy."

"Neither has the Middle West," he continued. "We have understood all the time that the Navy Department

GANDHI IS RECALLED BY INDIAN CONGRESS

Wire Bases Return Urge on Assertion That Britain Has Failed in Demands.

Bombay, India, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Asserting the British government had failed to grant its demands for independence, the Indian National Congress today cabled Mahatma Gandhi in London, that his further attendance at the round-table conference was unnecessary and urged him to return to India at once.

While leaving the final decision to Gandhi, the congress' working committee adopted a resolution saying "The people of India should not allow themselves to be deflected from the right path, but should organize themselves and prepare for united effective action." Recent attempts by radicals on the lives of British officials were condemned.

Gandhi was asked to abandon his proposed tour of Europe and come home at the earliest moment on the additional grounds that British authorities were using oppressive measures against the peasants in Bengal, the northwest frontier province, the United provinces and other districts.

"The various facts and circumstances will be better known to Gandhi on the spot," it was said.

London, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—On receipt of a cablegram from the Indian National Congress, a number of Indian delegates to the round-table conference today went to Oxford, where Mahatma Gandhi was speaking, to confer with him on his plans for the future.

Representative Taylor, Of Tennessee, Mending

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 8 (A.P.).—The condition of Representative J. Will Taylor, of the Second Tennessee District, who underwent an operation for appendicitis early yesterday at a Memphis hospital, was described by his physician tonight as "very good."

Mr. Taylor was stricken with appendicitis Friday while at luncheon with a party of friends. He was taken to a hospital and his condition became such that an immediate operation was decided upon shortly after midnight. He withstood the operation well and continued to show satisfactory progress toward recovery today.

RASKOB ASKS $2,000 FROM EACH WORKER

Tells How "Minute Men" Are To Conduct Drive and Erase Deficit.

(Associated Press.)

Chairman Raskob has told all members of the Democratic national committee how the party's "minute men" will form an advisory group also responsible for getting and keeping red figures off the balance sheet.

Each applicant will be asked to pledge his "best efforts to give or get" $2,000 toward the $1,500,000 being sought to meet preconvention needs and start presidential campaign work.

The Democrats in their last report to the House clerk said they owed $768,150.

Announcement of Raskob's detailed explanation of the purpose of the "minute men" was made yesterday by the Democratic national committee. It quoted Jouett Shouse, executive chairman and temporary commander of the new corps, as outlining the objective of the group in this fashion:

"To keep the national committee in close touch with local political trends of a national significance; on the basis of these trends, to counsel and aid the party in the formulation of national policies and in the remedying of unfavorable local conditions where existing, and to stand ready to assist the national committee, to maintain and develop a virile and financially strong national organization."

The organization will be a corporate one with its own constitution and elected offices. Former Gov. Nellie Tayloe Ross of Wyoming and former Gov. Harry Flood Byrd of Virginia

Season's Worst Typhoon Strikes Island of Luzon

Manila, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—The worst typhoon experienced in several months struck the Island of Luzon today and caused serious damage to the sugar cane and rice crops, which were about to be harvested.

Wire communications were disrupted and there was apparently a slight damage to shipping as the center of the typhoon was 130 miles west of the Philippines. Manila escaped with little damage.

Child Freed From Closet Finds Playmate in Hospital

Little Edith Riley and Smiling Red-Haired Boy Share Toys Given by Sympathetic Friends and Gaily Wander Down Gallinger's Halls.

The paradise of childhood, lost to little Edith Riley, because of her alleged imprisonment for four years in a dingy closet, has been found by her in a flower filled and toy packed room in Gallinger Hospital.

Something new has come into her life. Now she has friends, strangers once, but now sympathetic, understanding friends. They came yesterday and brought with them beautiful flowers, which rarely are found in a drab closet.

Better still, there were toys, all sorts of them; toys in the abundance that normal children visualize at the approach of Christmas time. People who never knew Edith, but read about her story, came heavily laden with playthings, more than the most fortunate child could wish for.

Best of all, Edith has a playmate. His name is Russell and he's a smiling youngster, with laughing brown eyes, and great shock of curly red hair. When he grins, and that's nearly always, two deep dimples crease his freckled face.

When Russell and Edith go wandering down the hall, hand in hand, one finds it difficult to fathom the friendship, unless it is the unquestioning companionship of childhood. For Russell is nearly deaf and Edith speaks hardly above a whisper.

How they convey their thoughts to each other is unknown, unless Russell's perpetual smile and laughing brown eyes have been accepted by Edith as the seal of friendship. In this companionship, there is no childish prattle, just gestures and Russell's ringing laugh.

As friendships go, this one is short. It began Friday when Edith was

EXPERTS URGE NATIONS' PACT TO AID SILVER

SALES AGREEMENT AMONG PROPOSALS

(Associated Press.)

A 4-point program topped by a sales agreement among the principal silver-producing nations was recommended yesterday by a committee of experts of the International Chamber of Commerce to boost the value of the metal.

The report was made public by Silas H. Strawn, chairman of the chamber's American committee. It said negotiations to make effective the proposals of the experts are going forward through the chamber's national committees with the private groups and governments directly concerned.

The second recommendation was that any Government which finds it impossible to secure a sufficient supply of gold "might consider the purchase of an amount of silver against which notes of low denomination, covered by silver to almost the full value of the gold coin which it substitutes, would be issued."

Would Boost Confidence.

It also was suggested that the international chamber "use its good offices to urge governments to restore their subsidiary coinages to prewar fineness within the limits of the national law." The report said this would help to restore confidence in the value of silver throughout the world.

Finally the committee recommended "that those interested in the sale of silver might with advantage emulate the example set in other industries by the establishment of research institutes for the purpose of devising new uses and expanding present uses of the product."

The committee, which included Ernest Franklin, of London; E. D. Van Walree, of Bernn, Holland, and Marshall W. Tuthill, of New York, was appointed to report on "the practicability of immediate international action with a view to influencing the production, sale or price of silver."

Resolution Adopted.

At the last meeting of the international group, held in Washington, a resolution was adopted urging an international conference to seek ways of stabilizing the silver industry. However, nothing has materialized, and the experts observed:

"We are given to understand that such a course of action is not likely to commend itself to the governments concerned in the problem, unless it be that silver is dealt with as a side issue in a new world economic conference, the convocation of which has been suggested."

Discussing the proposed sales agreement, the committee said it thought the best results may be achieved "by friendly cooperation and careful observation of prices, with a view to establishing a somewhat higher, although not too high, level compatible with the interests of sellers and buyers as well as holders."

China Most Concerned.

China was described as the country most concerned with the course of silver prices. The report said.

Al Smith Spurns Candidacy Scheme

Philadelphia Organization Planned to Raise 32,000,000 Backers.

New York, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith today repudiated publicly a Philadelphia and a New York organization seeking to raise money ostensibly for the promotion of his candidacy for President in 1932.

The Philadelphia organization, headed by Miles William Lederer, editor of Plain Facts, addressed a circular letter to voters, claiming to be soliciting 32,000,000 voters to the standard of the Democratic leader. A $1 a year subscription, Mr. Smith said, entered into the transaction. He asserted he had not authorized circulation of any such petition "and can not countenance its use under my name."

"Smith Stickers of America," the New York concern, offered stickers bearing a picture of "Al" Smith and the legend "Nominate Al Smith for President—He Sticks to America." The stickers were offered at one cent each, with "a few free on request to those who can not afford them."

Lisbon Express Robber Takes Money Shipment

Leiria, Portugal, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—A daring train robber who stole 250,000 escudos (about $9,250) from the Lisbon Express, which was carrying the money to the Bank of Portugal, was sought today.

The robber secreted himself in the mail car while the train was standing at a siding and jumped off with the cash at the next station.

FRANCO-REICH ACCORD NEARS ON DEBT STUDY

Francois-Poncet Confers With Laval About Inquiry Body.

BOTH CHANGE PLANS AND RETURN TO PARIS

World Bank Board to Center Interest Today on Steps Taken by Premier.

Paris, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—France and Germany are approaching an agreement over the question of forming an advisory committee under the Young plan to reexamine Germany's capacity to pay reparations, informed quarters were led to believe tonight.

They attached significance to an unexpected return to Paris of Andre Francois-Poncet, Ambassador to Berlin, and to a sudden change in Premier Laval's plan to stay on his Normandy farm until Wednesday.

The ambassador arrived today and went direct to the office of the premier, who also had returned to Paris. They had a conference of an hour and a half.

Afterward it was said the ambassador brought no new proposals, but was called to give an account of his recent conversations with Chancellor Bruening, of Germany, and officials of the German foreign office. The ambassador said he would take a talk with Foreign Minister Briand tomorrow.

At Odds Over Committee.

France has insisted on a special advisory committee, as provided by the Young plan, to consider the reparations problem. Germany has contended such a committee would be too restricted in its powers to examine the situation thoroughly.

Although Germany was understood to want an international conference with full powers instead, it was considered likely that if France insisted on using the Young plan machinery Germany might propose that the interested governments endow the committee with the power to examine unconditional as well as conditional payments.

Basel, Switzerland, Nov. 8 (A.P.). The powers of a commission which may be established under the Young plan to determine Germany's capacity to pay reparations were discussed today by representatives of the central banks, conferring informally preparatory to the monthly meeting of the World Bank's directors tomorrow.

May Invoke Provision.

A strong belief prevailed here that Germany is on the point of invoking that provision of the Young plan which permits the Reich to ask the World Bank to set up an inquiry into Germany's financial condition if she declares herself unable to continue payments under the present schedule.

It is understood in informed quarters that the French government wishes to limit the powers of such a commission. Its position is said to be that the commission should determine merely the facts and leave the various governments a free hand to determine what should be done about them.

Germany, however, wishes the inquiry to have full authority to make recommendations for whatever revisions in payments might seem necessary or desirable. The other great powers, except France, are con-

Tammany to Fight For House Places

Delegation Is Reported to Be Backing Byrns for Speakership.

New York, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—The Times says the Tammany delegation of 21 members in the House of Representatives will make a fight for recognition in chairmanships of important committees.

Tammany representatives are entitled to six chairmanships under the seniority rule. But, the newspaper says, since these are divided among three representatives, Tammany can hardly expect to get all of them.

The delegation has virtually decided not to contest the floor leadership and, the Times reports, has decided to support Representative Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, as floor leader. The Tammany group previously announced support of John N. Garner, of Texas, as Speaker.

Police and Wife Search For Alec Francis, Actor

Los Angeles, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Police tonight instituted a search throughout Southern California for Alec B. Francis, 69, stage and screen actor, missing since early yesterday when he stepped from a taxicab at the Pacific Electric Railway Station here.

Francis was due to work in a talking picture with Greta Garbo yesterday at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studio, but failed to appear. Growing concern caused his wife, officials of the company and friends to enlist police aid.

Diplomatic Boycott Held Bluff in Tokyo

Japan Refuses to Budge On League Threat and Repeats Intimation of Dropping Membership If Dictation Is Continued.

Tokyo, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Reports that the powers might impose a diplomatic boycott in backing up the League of Nations against Japan were characterized in official circles today as diplomatic intimidation, which has not caused Tokyo to budge an inch from its original stand.

It was authoritatively stated that if the league persisted in attempting to dictate concerning Manchuria, Tokyo would be compelled to withdraw from the league. Japan has already contended that the Manchurian situation was an affair concerning Japan and China, and should be settled between themselves.

Officially, Japan had not been told by Kenkichi Yoshizawa, its representative at Geneva, concerning the diplomatic boycott proposal, government heads having heard of it only through press dispatches.

As viewed here, the diplomatic boycott would amount practically to a severence of relations with the countries involved and cause serious complications from every angle. In Japan's eyes, the league is assuming a role of "superstate," which Tokyo views with greatest dissatisfaction.

Authoritative sources said today Japan aimed to secure from China a solemn signed agreement, with the League of Nations as witness, covering Foreign Minister Shidehara's five fundamental points.

It was stressed that such a new agreement would take the shape of a protocol if the present tense situation was to be eased, and would

FOUR DIE, 10 HURT; FIGHT ENDS AT DAWN

Foreign Colonies Menaced by 2,000 Armed Chinese, Former Soldiers.

Developments in the Manchurian struggle between China and Japan yesterday were as follows:

First, American troops of the Fifteenth Infantry on Far Eastern duty, under command of Col. James D. Taylor, were standing by to restore order in the city of Tientain after an attempted assassination of the former boy Emperor of China, Hsuan Tung;

Second, "No alarming reports" for the last 24 hours were forthcoming from the Manchurian front to the Japanese Embassy here;

Third, proclamations of Manchurian autonomy under Japanese protection were announced at Mukden and the city of Kirin was reported following the autonomy movement also.

Fourth, Secretary Stimson spent the entire day at his home, Woodley, studying the Manchurian situation in the light of Baron Shidehara's forthright reply to French Foreign Minister Briand.

Fifth, the Japanese foreign office refused to be moved by what they termed "diplomatic intimidation," the possibility of withdrawal of diplomatic relations with the Tokio government by the other nations of the world.

Peiping, Monday, Nov. 9 (U.P.).—Four Chinese rioters were killed and ten wounded in Tientain today when Japanese troops, guarding their concession, bombarded the surrounding Chinese districts with 40 shells from small guns.

The Japanese bombardment followed a night of terror in which 2,000 armed Chinese former soldiers attacked the native police station, the railway station, the governor's headquarters and threatened the foreign colonies. Hostilities ceased shortly after daybreak.

While American, Italian and French troops had been ordered out from garrison to protect their nationals, the Japanese commander had given until 5 a. m. for disorders to cease within 300 yards of his concession. Continuance of disturbances was followed by the bombardment.

Bribe Money Declared Found.

It was asserted that bribe money, allegedly paid the rioters by Japanese, and Japanese pistols were found on the bodies of the four dead Chinese. Rioters arrested earlier had assertedly admitted that Japanese supplied them with ammunition and money to create disorders. Chinese troops assumed the duties of Tientain police this morning.

The Japanese legation said the fighting started when Chinese troops retreating from Kirin attacked the garrison at Tientain. The Japanese disclaimed all responsibility for the events, and denied participation until forced into a bombardment to protect their concession.

Peiping was calm.

American Soldiers Ready.

Peiping, Monday, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—The Fifteenth United States Infantry, called out last night, was standing by today in Tientsin after a mob of more than 1,000 persons attacked native police on the border between the Chinese city and the Japanese concession.

The American soldiers were awaiting orders from Col. James D. Taylor. Italian and French troops also were standing by in their respective concessions. Three companies of Chinese troops were preparing to intervene.

Reports reaching Manchurian headquarters here shortly after midnight said shooting was continuing and machine guns were being used. The origin of the outbreak was uncertain, but the Chinese alleged the Japanese distributed arms and ammunition with the object of causing disturbances.

It was estimated that between 1,000 and 2,000 persons dressed in Chinese

GRANDI TO PRESENT 5-POINT PROGRAM

Debts, Reparations and Keeping of Gold Standard to Be Discussed.

Rome, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—When Dino Grandi meets President Hoover at Washington he will speak with more authority than possibly any other foreign minister in the world. He speaks for Mussolini and Mussolini speaks for Italy.

Il Duce trained Grandi as his undersecretary for foreign affairs, hence they might be expected to see things much alike. Grandi, who has worked with his chief for years and should know his mind, goes to Washington with an ability to talk freely and knowing exactly how far he can go.

Grandi takes with him to Washington a program of at least five points:

1. An end to the "tragic bookkeeping" of debts and reparations.
2. Disarmament by any method Italy thinks fair, such as a budgetary limitation.
3. Maintenance of the gold standard.
4. Revision of the peace treaties to establish "justice among nations."
5. World economic cooperation.

Italy prides herself on having made prompt acceptance of the Hoover moratorium and renewed declarations that burdensome debts and reparations must cease soon. She also advocated a temporary truce in armaments for a year.

On the revision of treaties Mussolini never has been very definite ex-

Jugoslavian Election Marked by Light Vote

Belgrade, Jugoslavia, Nov. 8 (A.P.). A light vote was cast today in Jugoslavia's general election, which will give the country its first parliament since the constitution was abrogated in 1929.

Rain and the fact that only the government list of candidates was eligible probably kept many of the voters away from the polls. It was estimated that only 50 per cent of the qualified electors voted, as compared with 73 per cent in the last election in 1927. No disorders were reported.

KENSINGTON CYCLIST IS KILLED AT RACES

W. B. Pugh's Machine Skids From Curve on Track Near Baltimore.

William B. Pugh, 21-year-old motorcycle racer, of Kensington, Md., was almost instantly killed yesterday afternoon when thrown from a machine he was testing for a race at the Milford Speedway, near Baltimore.

As more than 200 persons, who had gathered to witness a regular Sunday program of racing, looked on, Pugh was hurled to his death when the machine skidded on a turn.

Officials said he was "warming up" the motorcycle and had planned to enter it in one of the races. He had circled the track once, witnesses said, and was starting the second lap. The machine skidded in soft dirt, crashed through a guard rail and hurtled into a patch of woods.

Pugh was thrown clear and landed on the track. He was taken to the University Hospital in Baltimore.

Police of Baltimore County went to the track, located at Pikesville, 8 miles from Baltimore, and arrested Leo J. Cornell, Philadelphia race promoter. He was charged with maintaining a nuisance. Five motorcycle drivers were also arrested, but they were later released.

The race track had been the subject of a controversy for some time, county officers declared, and Cornell had been warned frequently to close up. Following a protest signed by Dr. W. W. Davis, secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, and several Baltimore clergymen, police were on hand yesterday to see that he complied.

Pugh was son of the late Judge William B. and Viola Pugh of Kensington. His body was taken to the undertaking establishment of William Reuben Pumphrey at Rockville.

La Follettes' Daughter Lives Only Four Hours

Four hours and fifteen minutes after she was born, the infant daughter of Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., of Wisconsin, died yesterday at Garfield Memorial Hospital. The child was born at 1:30 yesterday morning and died at 5:45 a. m. Mrs. La Follette was reported to be recovering. The infant was the first child of the youthful senator and his bride, who were married in Madison, Wis., September 17, 1930.

Reign of Terror in Illinois Milk War Halted by U. S.

Two Months of Slugging, Shooting and Destruction of Hundreds of Gallons of Dairy Products Ceases as Judge Warns "All Parties."

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Southern Illinois' two-month milk war, replete with sluggings, destruction of property and terrorism in general, appeared tonight to have been ended by intevention of the United States Government.

The cause of the dispute—friction between an association of dairy farmers and a St. Louis milk company—remains unsettled, but county and State authorities said they believe the actual warfare has been effectively stopped.

To Federal Judge Louis Fitzhenry was given credit for halting the actual rioting. It was he who issued a permanent injunction restraining the embattled farmers and milk truck drivers from further violence.

The disorders started last August shortly after the Pevely Milk Co. opened negotiations for a new contract under which the Sanitary Milk Producers Association, with a membership of about 7,500 dairy farmers in Illinois, Missouri and Iowa, was to furnish the Pevely company with milk.

The farmers objected violently to the contract, charging it gave the distributing company the right to fix prices at which milk was to be sold. The Pevely company replied with a charge that the milk producers were attempting to gain control of the St Louis milk market and force the company to buy from association members.

Negotiations to settle the dispute came to nothing. Then began the period of terrorism.

Masked men stopped trucks carrying milk to St. Louis, beat the drivers into unconsciousness, and spilled thousands of gallons of milk on the highways. In some cases, trucks were

JAPANESE REPORT TENSION LESSENED

Secretary of State, Home, Remains in Touch With Cable Room.

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN.

Secretary of State Stimson remained at his home, Woodley, yesterday in close touch with the cable room of the State Department and received all dispatches from abroad bearing on the Manchurian situation. The Japanese Embassy here announced last night that "No alarming reports" for the last 24 hours had been received from Tokyo and this encouraging report somewhat lessened the tension that had developed over the impasse between the Chinese and Japanese military and diplomatic forces.

The authorities at the Japanese Embassy also announced the receipt of Foreign Minister Briand's message to the foreign office by Baron Shidehara, the Japanese minister of foreign affairs. This third note from M. Briand was not made public, but it was declared to be the most forceful and pointed that the chairman of the league council had yet sent.

Secretary Stimson made an exhaustive study of the points that were made in the Japanese reply to M. Briand's second message. This appeal from the league council closely followed the vigorous representation that was made to the Japanese foreign office by American Ambassador W. Cameron Forbes under instructions from Secretary Stimson.

Effect Not Noticed.

The cumulative effect of both American and league representations to the Japanese government has not yet been noticeable. The United States acted independently in suggesting to the Tokyo government a reconsideration of the territorial guarantees of China solemnly made by the Japanese government and seven other nations in the Nine Power Pact. The league in its three notes to the Tokyo government stated with increasing emphasis the necessity for cessation of further military activity and freely discussed in diplomatic circles audible to the Japanese ambassador, Kenkichi Yoshizawa, the possibility of withdrawing diplomatic representation at Tokyo in an effort to bring the Japanese government to terms.

However, the Japanese official attitude remains unchanging. In his reply to M. Briand, the Japanese foreign minister announced that he could not trust the Chinese to the fulfillment of their obligations on the basis with which the Chinese government accepted the five fundamental principles in the Japanese declaration of October 26. Baron Shidehara announced that the Chinese acceptance "seems to give rise to a doubt whether it is in the contemplation of the Chinese government to call in question the validity of some of the treaties constituting the basic embodiment of the relations between Japan and China."

"It may be needless to state that the Japanese government could not for a moment entertain such a contention."

Sets Up Prestige.

The Japanese government evidently will assure the maintenance of Japanese prestige in Manchuria by setting up various autonomous groups under Japanese protection. Reports from Mukden indicated yesterday that the first steps in this direction had already been taken.

Puppet governors would satisfy the requirements of international usage by being Chinese, but they would be all under the domination of the Japanese foreign office. Sympathetic autonomous moves were also reported from Kirin, another wealthy section of Manchuria, where Japanese influence is responsible. It is not believed that the United States would recognize any of these local Manchurian governments, even if called upon to do so. It was pointed out that the State Department persistently withheld American recognition of the government of Marshal Chang Tso-lin and after his death maintained its refusal toward the government of his son, Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang. The sole source of Chinese authority was the Peiping government and subsequently the Nanking government, with which the United States carried on diplomatic relations.

Further representations to the recalcitrant Japanese authorities will probably depend on the developments of the forthcoming week. The league council will reconvene eight days hence, either in Geneva or in Paris, and unless the situation in Manchuria has shown some definite indications of settlement, the delegates to the council, including Prentiss B. Gilbert on behalf of the United States, may be asked to consider the grave and portentous ste of withdrawal of diplomatic relations from Tokyo.

Such a step would practically isolate the Japanese government from intercourse with the other nations of the world, and it is not believed likely that Japanese military influence with the emperor, however strong, would prevail against such a situation.

Centers on Laval.

Tomorrow's meeting of the board of directors will center its attention upon the progress that Premier Laval has been making in Franco-German negotiations since he returned from the United States. It is believed possible, though not probable, that these negotiations will reach a stage where Germany would be ready to ask for the commission of inquiry.

The formal agenda includes consideration of a report on the world bank's trusteeship of the Dawes loan of 1924 to Germany. The report makes clear that amortization and interest payments will go through as scheduled and this was taken as a good omen of Germany's financial condition.

The directors will hear also the results of the conference at Prague on regulations for government restriction of foreign currency. They will consider a proposal for a 60,000,000-schilling loan to Austria and the appointment of a financial adviser to the Hungarian National Bank.

"Mr. Henry Pu Yi," Once Boy Emperor, Now in Retirement.

(Associated Press.)

Tientsin, a large commercial city with an estimated population of 900,000, is the port for Peiping, with which it is connected by rail as well as with Manchuria.

It is situated at the junction of the Peiho and Hunho rivers and the riverfront of the Peiho is governed by foreign powers, which have various concessions.

These concessions were obtained by treaty after the city was occupied by English and French troops in 1858.

The foreign quarters suffered severely in the Boxer Rebellion of 1900.

Since then, foreign troops have had the right, by a protocol signed in 1901, to defend the legation quarter in Peiping and to occupy selected points between Peiping and the sea. Foreign garrisons were strongly reinforced in 1927 during the conflict between rival factions of north and south China, but since have been reduced.

The American force was reduced to 30 officers and 768 men, the garrison consisting of the Fifteenth United States Infantry Regiment under command of Col. James D. Taylor.

The total number of foreign troops in Tientsin at the last census two years ago was 4,442, including the following: British, 1,213; French, 1,476; Italian, 353; Japanese, 593.

Huan Tung was dethroned at the age of 5 by the Chinese revolution of 1911. He was restored to the throne in 1917 for seven days, then was finally ousted by military action, which reestablished the republic.

Ordered to leave the palace at Peiping in 1924, he fled to the Japanese Legation and eventually escaped the Chinese republicans by going to Tientsin disguised as a coolie.

Now 26 years old, he is known as "Mr. Henry Pu Yi," and lives in retirement in the Japanese section of Tientsin, taking slight interest in politics, preferring instead to sing Chinese operas and tinker with mechanical contraptions.

His second wife, daughter of a Manchu noble, recently demanded a divorce on grounds of ill treatment.

clothes participated in the attack, but allegedly were instigated by Japanese.

The attack followed an unsuccessful attempt Saturday night to assassinate the former boy emperor of China, Hsuan Tung, who has been living in the Japanese concession since 1924 under the name of Henry Pu-Yi.

A Chinese hotel messenger handed him a basket of fruit containing a bomb which failed to explode. When the man was arrested he said he had been given the basket by a Chinese in the French concession and had been instructed to hand it to the former emperor without comment.

Police said they could give no motive for the attempt, but believed it was connected with recent rumors that the Japanese were planning to establish Hsuan Tung as emperor of Manchuria in succession to Gov. Chang Hsueh-Liang. He is said to prefer living quietly in Tientsin as a private citizen.

Chinese reports said later that a mob of 800 armed Chinese, together with some Japanese, rushed from the Japanese concession into Chinese territory and assaulted the police.

The few who were arrested were quoted as saying they had been paid $40 in silver (about $10) to participate in the attack. The casualties were unknown. It was believed the ons'aught was aimed at the police station, the civil governor's headquarters and the railway station.

Mukden, Nov. 8 (U.P.).—Proclamation by the government of Mukden of complete independence from the Peiping and Nanking governments brought the movement for Manchurian autonomy to a critical stage today, with other cities, notably Kirin, prepared to follow Mukden's example.

The movement at Mukden was fostered under Japanese leadership, and severance of relations with Peiping and Nanking last night was announced with full approval of the Japanese.

The massing of Chinese forces loyal to Gen. Chang Hsueh-Liang, commender of the district, was reported today as in progress southward from Anganchi.

According to Japanese military reports, these forces outnumber the Japanese 20 to 1, and were preparing to launch an offensive. The situation, therefore, suggests the possibility of a further Japanese advance for the purpose of enabling Chinese who are friendly to the Japanese movement to occupy the city of Tsitsihar, the only provincial capital which is still beyond the Japanese influence.

Japanese Reservists Pour In.

Japanese military sources also reported that the government of Chinchow is now directing the operations of guerilla bands against the Japanese, this again indicating the possibility of coming action to the south of Mukden.

As a whole, the city of Mukden accepted the government's declaration calmly and there were no disturbances originating from Chinese sources.

The announcement was the signal, however, for the immediate influx of Japanese reservists from nearby towns, who poured into the city throughout the day to offer their support to the Japanese commanders.

The reservists made an unofficial holiday of the occasion, organizing a wildly enthusiastic parade, headed by uniformed officers, through the streets of Mukden.

The demonstrators reached the highest pitch of patriotic hysteria when they marched past Japanese shops in which lithographs were displayed showing "our heroic troops" in action. Many of the posters bore the inscription: "Japan Fights China."

Gen. Chang Hsueh-Liang, former dictator of Manchuria, who has been in conference at Peiping, was reported rushing back to the "war zone" in an armored car.

Tokyo, Monday, Nov. 9 (A.P.).—A war office report, today indicated, officials said, that Chinese forces are concentrating south of Anganchi, northwestern Manchuria, near the scene of last week's three-day battle in which Japanese troops routed Gen. Mah Chan-Shan's army.

Casualties Placed at 1,000.

London, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—A Harbin dispatch to the Daily Mail says Chinese authorities there report that Japanese troops have withdrawn south of the Nonni River in Manchuria, with heavy losses after the battle of Nonni Bridge. The report was based on wireless messages, which the Chinese said they had received from the battlefield.

Gen. Chang Hai-Pu, described as a Chinese ally of Japan, was said to have lost thousands of men in the retreat. Casualties among the troops of Gen. Mah Chan-Shaw, who were routed by the Japanese, were reported to have exceeded 1,000.

Renewed firing yesterday was reported in a telephone message from Anganchi.

make possible evacuation of Japanese troops from occupied Manchurian territory.

This again brings China up against the knotty issue of the validity of the 1915 treaties which Aristide Briand, chairman of the league council, in his note of October 29, contends is covered by the Chinese proposal to submit the treaties to the league.

To this viewpoint Japan utterly refuses to accede. It is contended that at the root of Tokyo's refusal to compromise with China is the feeling that China's word can not be trusted. Japan claims that contention is well grounded in view of the past record of Chinese repudiation of treaty commitments. Therefore, Japan aims to secure China's solemn pledge.

Particularly irritating to Japan was the question of the salt revenue from Newchang, the subject of a note from M. Briand. In this connection the foreign office spokesman said Tokyo was drafting a protest to the league in which it will be made clear that the league secretariat has shown undue activity on a question which has nothing to do with the league covenant or the Kellogg antiwar pact.

The spokesman emphasized that it was the Chinese Peace Preservation Society of Mukden which has demanded that the state office at Newchang forward available funds to Mukden as had been customary when Chang Hsueh-Liang, deposed Manchurian governor, was in power. It was further stated that Japan has not appropriated any money from Chinese incomes for the support of the Japanese army in Manchuria and all supplies are paid for by drafts on Tokyo.

The communication being drafted will call attention to Chinese charges of interference in the collection of salt revenues, which were declared to be without foundation. The contention will be stressed that Geneva is inclined to take all reports from China on their face value, which is "an unfair arrangement" to which Japan takes strong exception.

Meanwhile but little news had been received from Manchuria. Japanese engineers, under the protection of troops which dispersed the army of Mah Chang-Shan last week after a three-day engagement, have started repairs to the Nonni River Bridge.

Telephone messages to Harbin, the Rengo News Agency reported, said Anganchi and Tsitsihar were alive with military activity. Gen. Mah Chan-Shan is remaining at Tsitsihar.

A Rengo dispatch, from Harbin, later confirmed by the war department here, said the Japanese consul there had received a telegram from Consul Shimizu at Tsitsihar Saturday night saying that all was quiet now although a number of Koreans had been murdered near the consulate within the last few days.

The Japanese government received a telegram from Consul Shimizu at Tsitsihar, Manchuria, today exploding published reports that he and two of his aids had been assassinated by Chinese troops under Gen. Mah Chan-Shan.

The Tokyo newspaper Nichi Nichi Shimbun published a special edition reporting that George C. Hanson, American consul in Harbin, had learned of the murders and had informed his Japanese colleagues.

Shimizu telegraphed the cabinet here and the Japanese consul in Harbin that "all are safe now and things are quiet." Gen. Mah retreated to Tsitsihar after being defeated at the battle of Nonni River and is now intrenched there.

BRANDEIS' BIRTHDAY IS NOTED BY HOOVERS

Letter of Congratulation on Coming 75th Anniversary Is Sent to Jurist.

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover has dispatched a letter of congratulation and best wishes to Justice Louis Dembitz Brandeis, of the United States Supreme Court, upon the occasion of his seventy-fifth birthday anniversary.

Justice Brandeis will celebrate his birthday Friday. The text of the letter, forwarded to him in advance, was not made public at the White House.

New York, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—The Jewish Telegraphic Agency tonight made public the letter sent by President Hoover to Louis Dembitz Brandeis, justice of the Supreme Court, who next Friday celebrates his seventy-fifth birthday.

The letter follows:

"Mrs. Hoover and I wish to be early in conveying to you our warmest congratulations on your seventy-fifth birthday. It is not necessary for us to remind you of the many satisfactions which have crowned your public service and that you reflect a heart and mind which have made the Nation your debtor.

"Even during your service as a member of the highest court in the land, you have found time to give service to the advancement of the Jewish homeland and I have no doubt this has brought happiness and comfort to thousands.

"We wish you many happy returns of the day."

Tributes to Justice Brandeis are also paid by Felix M. Warburg, Adolph S. Ochs, Lieut. Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, Col. Edward M. House, Arthur Brisbane and Alfred M. Cohen, president of the B'nai B'rith.

3 Sailors Are Buried As Blast Quiz Goes On

San Pedro, Calif., Nov. 8 (U.P.).—While a naval board of inquiry prepared to continue its investigation into a gun explosion that killed five men on the U. S. S. Colorado late Thursday, funeral services were conducted for three of the victims today.

The joint service was held for Lieut. Ralph F. Bradford, jr., Maurice G. Hawkins and Louis A. Clark. Bodies of the other two victims, J. J. Schnur, of St. Louis, Mo., and Clarence E. V. Wint, of Los Angeles, have been sent to relatives.

Donor of Art Gems To U. S. Dies Poor

John Gellatly Presented $5,000,000 Collection to Smithsonian.

New York, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—John Gellatly, 78, who, in 1929, gave to the Nation an art collection then valued at $5,000,000, died here today of pneumonia, so poor, his widow said, she would have to borrow money to pay his funeral expenses.

Mr. Gellatly spent much of his life gathering the art collection which was accepted by Congress in 1929 for the National Gallery of the Smithsonian Institution. His widow, Mrs. Charlyne Whitely Gellatly, said she would appeal to Congress to reject the collection.

Mr. Gellatly will be buried Tuesday in Washington, D. C.

Church Critics Blamed For "Planeless" Show

(Associated Press.)

Representative Britten blames the "religious element" for the fact that Army and Navy planes were not ordered to take part in Chicago's aviation charity show.

Both services, the Illinois Republican said, "were anxious and willing to cooperate" in the program yesterday, but the "executive branch of the War Department refused to allow their aviators to fly on Sunday because of objections of church people."

Mr. Britten, whose district is in Chicago, tried to obtain Army and Naval planes for the show.

Woman Kills Self In Baltimore Hotel

Divorcee Fires Bullet Into Head as Man Declines Marriage.

Baltimore, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Mrs. Gertrude Merriken, 34, a divorcee, today shot and killed herself in a room in the Lord Baltimore Hotel occupied by Huldreich Egli, a consulting engineer, and her former employer, after he had refused her demand that they be instantly married.

The woman, a short time before, had left her 15-year-old son and her parents in another part of the city, telling them she was "going to church."

The engineer, who was seriously injured in an automobile accident several months ago, told the woman his health would not permit marriage. She then went into the bathroom, Egli told the police, and a moment later he heard the report of the pistol.

Police found her on the floor. The bullet had passed through the woman's head and was found in the tub. She died an hour later in a hospital. The coroner gave a suicide verdict.

Man, Hit During Fight, Will Lose One of Eyes

Jesse Kempe, colored, 35 years old, will lose the sight of one eye, as result of being struck several times over the head and about the face with a gallon jug during an altercation yesterday with a man he described as Robert Coates. The fight took place at 604 K street southeast, where both men reside.

Kempe also suffered severe lacerations of the scalp. He was treated first at Casualty Hospital and later transferred to the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital for expert attention to the injured optic member.

S. S. Conte Grande, at Sea, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Foreign Minister Dino Grandi, en route to the United States, was occupied today in studying a mass of reports bearing on his approaching conversations with President Hoover relative to world problems.

He worked in a deck chair unmindful of the pitching of the liner, which was skirting a storm and steaming in extremely rough waters for the ordinarily quiet Mediterranean. He and Signora Grandi were pleased because they were proving good sailors in spite of wind and wave.

Signor Grandi went to the gymnasium and tried the eletcric horse, the bicycle machine and other acrobatic equipment and then took his wife on a long walk about the decks. They attended mass afterward.

Soya Bean Diplomatic Key To Chinese-Japanese Row

By JOHN J. DALY

JAPANESE and Chinese soldiers seeking possession of the Nonni River Bridge along the Taonan-Enganchi Railroad, south of Tsitsihar in Western Manchuria, startle the world into the belief that war is imminent—that these old friends, China and Japan, are coming to grips.

The League of Nations, totally unacquainted with the facts, calls upon all its membership to withdraw diplomatic representatives from Tokyo unless Japan makes peace with China. They want the Japanese troops to jump off the bridge in Manchuria, but Japan says No.

It all comes under the head of Tosh!

There is no truth whatsoever in the world-wide belief that Japan is warring upon China. It is just so much table talk, what the French call "petits details," and the American label "a newspaper scare."

It is true that the Japanese and Chinese soldiers staged a skirmish around the Nonni River Bridge, but this does not make a war any more than one swallow makes a summer or quenches a thirst.

The totally distorted view of the situation proves again the old adage that one-half the world doesn't know how the other half lives.

Nothing could be farther from the truth than the statement, made in all seriousness, that Japan and China are about to drag Russia into a three-cornered fight in the Orient. The Moscow Communists, all het up, urge the workers and oppressed people of all the capitalistic world to support China against the imperialists. They, too, are talking through their hats, as will presently be seen.

• • • •

VIEWED in the light of what is actually happening in old Manchuria, the whole state of affairs takes on the complexion of a comic opera—a Japanese sandstorm in a Chinese teapot.

Actually, what has happened seems to be nothing more nor less than "a little misunderstanding." The basic cause of it all is the innocent little soya bean which provides the succulent sauce, or liquid condiment, used in both countries, and known either as Japanese soy or Chinese soy.

It seems, from the official communique, that not only the Nonni River Bridge, but other bridges in that vicinity, also are considered extremely important, being arteries in the movement of the soya bean.

What happened? Some Japanese aviators, in a little bombing expedition, or exhibition, blew up a couple of the bridges. Immediately Japanese engineers started to repair the bridges. While the work was going on, they were protected by Japanese soldiers. Through some sort of misunderstanding—so the Japanese declare—Gen. Mah's troops opened fire upon the engineers. Naturally the Japanese soldiers went into action, chasing Chinese down the tracks.

The American State Department has been informed that Gen. Mah gives assurances that these forays will not continue. The Japanese engineers will be permitted to finish work on the bridges.

• • • •

THIS happy solution was brought about as soon as the Chinese general learned of the soya bean crop movement. Had it been mentioned in the first place, all the difficulties would have been smoothed over. No true son of Nippon, or of China, either, would molest the marketing of the soya bean crop.

The bean, sacred in all countries, is more so in the Orient. Hand in hand, Japan and China will fight for the free and untrammelled circulation of the soya bean.

ARGENTINE BALLOTS WITHOUT DISORDERS

Normal Vote Is Cast for President and Members of Congress.

Buenos Aires, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Despite cloudy and unpleasant weather, Argentina cast a normal vote today in nation-wide elections for president, members of Congress and other officials who are designed to inaugurate the return of constitutional government.

With the state of siege lifted until midnight, the balloting was quiet and orderly everywhere and the massed troops and police had an idle day. The only disorder reported was in the town of Arequito, Santa Fe Province, where a few shots were fired in a street fracas.

The presidential candidates were Gen. Augustin P. Justo, nominee of the Conservative coalition, and Lisandro de la Torre, representing the Liberal coalition. Both expressed confidence of victory.

The polls closed at 6 o'clock and the ballot boxes were collected by the National Congress and were placed under military guard. The tabulation may take three weeks or more, but the result will be indicated earlier by daily announcement of the count.

After the closing of the polls police estimated that 80 per cent of the 374,000 registered voters in the city had cast their ballots. The minister of war announced that advices from all over the country indicated the voting was orderly.

Gen. Justo led in the first returns from Entrerios Province, which gave him 802 votes, 491 on the Antipersonalist radical ticket and 311 on the National Democratic ticket, as against 192 for De la Torre, Leftist coalition candidate.

The immediate count in that province was possible because the election there was conducted by provincial authorities, who have been allowed to function instead of being superseded by a federal interventor as in other provinces.

Guarded by soldiers and postal employes, the ballot boxes began arriving tonight at the Congressional Palace, where the electoral commission will meet tomorrow to begin the official count.

Floods in Panama Endanger Canal

Heavy Rains Cause Waters to Rise Rapidly as Gale Sweeps Area.

Balboa, Canal Zone, Nov. 8 (A.P.) Torrential rains beating down on the isthumus continued to flood the Panama Canal today, tying up shipping and endangering the canal locks.

Seventeen ships were held up, twelve on the Atlantic side and five on the Pacific.

Rainfall at Colon during the last 36 hours was 11½ inches and a 38-mile gale swept over the isthumus this morning. Twelve gates of the Gatun Spillway were kept open to drain off the rising waters from the flooded Chagres River. The river was still rising, with the crest of the flood coming down from Salamanca in the mountains. A landslide blocked traffic on a road at Alaguela.

taken to the hospital from the closet in the home of her parents at 1110 Rhode Island avenue. Russell, somewhat shy at first, was swinging on the white crib in which Edith had been placed. At first, Edith ignored him and kept staring at the wall, as if she were in that dark closet.

Russell persevered. He brought her toys and finally, a wigless, undressed doll that other children had tossed aside. That was his master move, because Edith smiled sadly and since then they have been fast friends. Even after Russell had been placed in bed Friday night, like all the children in the ward, the nurses say, he came on tiptoe to Edith's room. Poking his red head in the door, he grinned. To him it was strange that the nurse attending Edith should be crying, then he grinned, and so did Edith.

Even her new friends, who came bearing flowers and presents, couldn't separate her from Russell. There were dolls, a dozen of them, with messages of love from other children who never knew Edith, but whose parents had told them of her. Russell's only rival was a big sleeping doll, which some tot had sent. For a while it occupied her attention. Then she and Russell shared its possession. Strangers bearing gifts came after visiting hours, but were turned away, leaving their presents behind.

Edith doesn't know that today her father, Harry L. Riley, and her stepmother will be brought before the grand jury on a charge of cruelty to children, or that they claim that she was always abnormal and thought it would be better to keep her at home than in an institution. Her stepmother says Edith was kept in the closet only during her absence.

If Edith does, the knowledge hasn't manifested itself. After all the tokens of love any sympathy had been showered upon Edith, she and Russell, carrying the big sleeping doll, went for a walk down the corridor.

"Have you ever had any other playmate?" Edith was asked.

"No, sir," she said, and looked at Russell. They both smiled and went down the hall, the big doll between them.

PRESIDENT PLANNING FOR CROWDED WEEK

Half-Dozen Major Problems Will Confront Hoover; Tax Troublous.

(Associated Press.)

With half a dozen or more major problems looming, among them a troublous tax question, President Hoover yesterday prepared for a crowded week ahead.

In it he must find time, too, for speech-making and to ready himself for new international conversations. Forign Minister Dino Grandi, of Italy, sailed Saturday and is expected here a week from today.

Although an immediate decision is not likely there are indications that the President is devoting more and more time to deciding whether the administration will stand for or against a tax increase.

The facts now before him show a widening chasm of more than $661,000,000 between Federal receipts and expenditures, with only a third of the fiscal year expired. Should the deficit increase at the same rate for the next eight months it would approach $2,000,000,000. Despite drastic subtractions in requests for next year's departmental spending money a budget of $3,632,000,000 is probable.

Had No Week-End Guests.

Although there was the usual Sabbath lull of governmental activities, President Hoover did not remain idle yesterday. After attending church in the morning he returned immediately to the White House. Contrary to usual custom the Hoovers had no week-end guests in order that the President's time might be more free.

The Chief Executive was kept informed of developments in Manchuria.

Other matters to which he is devoting at least part-time study include the many things to be bound up in his coming message to Congress.

Directly before him yesterday lay the 10,000-word report of his Navy League investigation committee. White House attaches declined to say, however, whether he has decided to let that vindication of his charges against the league head speak for itself, or whether he will comment publicly upon it.

Still another matter for which the Chief Executive has been preparing is his participation Wednesday in Armistice Day ceremonies. Although there has been no formal statement as to his plans, Mr. Hoover possibly will make at least one address and visit the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Devotes Time to Budget.

The President devoted a considerable slice of his time during the past week to budgetary matters. In line with his hope to avoid a tax increase, if possible, he reported on Friday $350,000,000 had been clipped from the budget requests of Government departments.

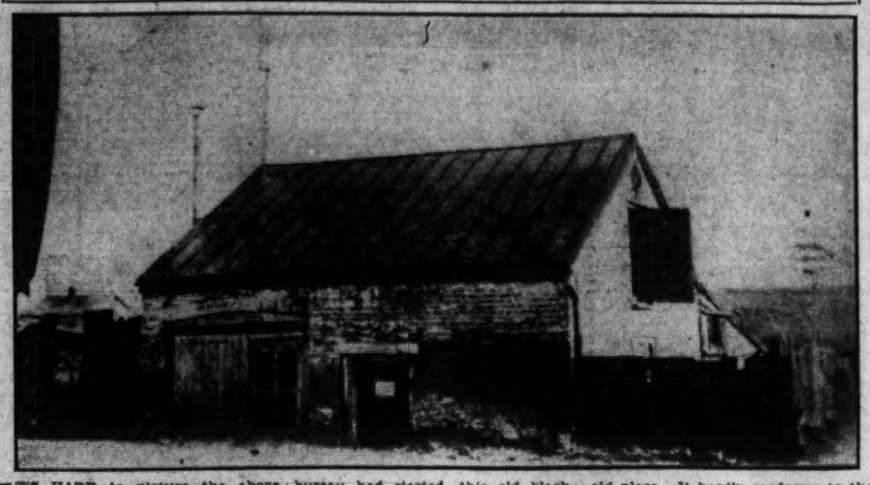
This subtraction, he estimated, would bring the coming budget to a point between $280,000,000 and $300,000,000 below the last similar document submitted to Congress. That called for $3,932,642,411. As he announced this, there was a buzz of talk in the Capital of a congressional move for higher taxes. The Administration itself has delved into the possible results of imposing a limited sales tax and revising income taxes.

Mr. Hoover served notice some time ago that a final decision would be deferred until the time Congress meets, in order to allow a little check upon the trend of receipts and expenditures.

Allied with his interest in the tax situation, the President did something else he thought would improve the economic situation, and automatically swell Federal income. A lengthy conference was held at the White House with real estate men, builders and bankers on accelerating home building and ownership. He laid before them several proposals which may be returned before a larger conference on the same subject here early in December.

The Chief Executive also called in members of the Chicago Board of Trade, receiving from them a report that machinery had been developed to limit bear raids in the grain pits.

When Washington Was Younger—No. 100



IT'S HARD to picture the above scene as being the site of the present Bureau of Engraving and Printing Building at Fourteenth and C streets southwest.

In the late eighties and early nineties, before the construction of the bureau had started, this old blacksmith shop stood on the site. It was used as a clubhouse for a unique organization of printers and was called the old Social Oyster Club.

Many prominent men were entertained at the "parties" in this quaint old place. It hardly conforms to the present day ideas of what a social clubhouse should look like. Many loads of oyster shells and beer bottles were probably carted away from the rear of the club during its heyday.

PARTY LEADERS SET PARLEYS THIS WEEK

Democrats and Republicans Will Plan Organization and Legislation.

(Associated Press.)

Party leaders will gather here this week to lay plans for organizing the House.

Both Representatives John N. Garner, of Texas, the Democratic Speakership choice, and John Q. Tilson, of Connecticut, Republican floor leader last session, are to arrive the middle of the week.

Mr. Tilson will confer with President Hoover and other administration officials on the possibility of organizing the House despite the Democratic plurality of three. However, he is unlikely to say anything about the Hoover legislative program until the Republicans caucus November 30 and determine upon a Speakership candidate.

Shoved into a numerical control of the House through elections and deaths, the Democrats are confronted by the problem of dividing the organization power between the North and South, and the selection of a floor leader. Mr. Garner has not indicated his choice for the leadership, but is known to have a generous attitude toward the Northern members on committee assignments.

Confident they can throw their full force behind Mr. Garner for Speaker, the Democrats plan to compose their differences on the power division at their caucus December 5.

In the meantime, they expect Gov. Sterling of Texas to call an election, probably November 28, to fill the vacancy in the Fourteenth Texas District, caused by the death Friday of the lone Republican from that State, Representative Harry M. Wurzbach. William Wurzbach, of San Antonio, a Democrat, and judge of Bexar County, is being boomed as successor to his late brother.

With this district, and the Fifth New Jersey, where a special election will be held December 1, the Democrats would have 219 seats against the Republicans' 214, the Farmer-Laborites 1, with a vacancy in the Fifth New Hampshire to be filled January 5. On the basis of the recent gubernatorial elections, the Democrats expect to take the vacant New Jersey district.

Already the Democrats are formulating a legislative program, although they realize that without a definite political majority it is difficult to pass party legislation when the House is so closely divided.

Representative Pou, of North Carolina, dean of the Democratic membership, said that with a hostile administration, it probably would be impossible for his party to enact much needed legislation.

"Probably the only thing we can do is to indicate to the Nation through our sponsorship of legislation, the line of policy we would follow if we should be successful in the 1932 elections," Mr. Pou said.

is in accord with the President's program; the attack of the Navy League was not justified in any degree."

"It should be understood and remembered," he said, "that the Navy League includes in its membership those who sell steel, and others commercially interested in the profits from armament building. These have a selfish interest to override their loyalty to their country and their own regard for the truth.

"The fact is, we have had this same kind of a fight from the Navy League—false statements, misconstructions of Government reports, half truths hooked up with barefaced falsehoods—every time we have tried to hold down expenditures for the Navy to a reasonable limit. It might be mentioned that the Army budget was reduced 40 millions almost without question—there is no commercial organization, such as the Navy League, boosting for big Army appropriations.

"The pity of it is that in the past the Navy League has imposed on the public, especially along the seaboard, as a patriotic organization. The country should be grateful to President Hoover for having torn off its mask and showed it to us as the greedy commercial organizations that it is—seeking to make excessive profits from the Government for steel and shipbuilding companies under the plea of superpatriotism."

Representative Burton L. French (Republican), of Idaho, for eight years in charge of the Navy appropriation bill in the House, yesterday supplemented the report of the Hammond committee with his own indictment of William Howard Gardiner, president of the Navy League. At the same time he expressed the opinion that the Nation would support the President in the controversy.

Mr. French said that Gardiner, in his "abysmal ignorance" attack on President Hoover, seemed to be "deliberate and malicious." Consequently, the Idaho member said, the Navy League leader was deserving of what the Hammond investigating committee had to say about him Saturday night—that he had voiced "many inaccuracies, false assertions, and erroneous conclusions."

Aside from the statement of Mr. French, the aftermath of the controversy was marked by a Sabbath-day quiet.

Mr. Gardiner, the "defendant" in the case, was maintaining silence in New York, and so were his associates in Washington.

However, those who know Gardiner were predicting that he would never satisfy the President's demand for a public apology. Not only that, but they were predicting that there would be a terrific echo of the whole controversy in the next Congress.

Statement of French.

The statement of Representative French follows:

"I have read the amazing statement of William Howard Gardiner, president of the Navy League, upon the subject 'The President and the Navy,' dated October 28, 1931, and the reply thereto contained in the report of the committee, of which Mr. John Hays Hammond, himself a member of the league, was chairman, issued November 7.

"The report says that the Gardiner statement contains 'many inaccuracies, false assertions and erroneous conclusions.'

"These are strong words, but they are true. The report is temperate and based upon facts. No one can read the statement of Mr. Gardiner for the Navy League and the report of the committee of which Mr. Hammond was chairman without realizing that Mr. Gardiner and his associates deserve the excoriation that they have received. Having in mind the sound policy of the President and the reasonable naval construction that is going forward, the issue right now becomes larger than the Navy League and resolves itself into whether or not the country shall have regard for actual naval needs and for the burdens of taxation that rest upon the people, as the President insists or, ignoring national welfare, turn the Federal Treasury over to the exploitation of those who have personal ends to serve—navy yards and shipbuilders, aircraft and munition manufacturers, and to some extent officers who are blinded by personal interest in seeking their own ends.

Truth Was Available.

"The statement of Mr. Gardiner seems to have been deliberate and malicious. It rests upon distorted tables and unsustained premises. The truth was available to Mr. Gardiner. The executive committee of the league, without awaiting the inquiry of the Hammond committee, announced its backing of Mr. Gardiner. When an organization that prates patriotism sinks to the level of issuing the type of propaganda that the Navy League has issued, faith in any legitimate reason for its existence is challenged.

"President Hoover was forbearing in not asking the committee to pass upon the slurs cast by the league upon the Chief Executive personally and the committee was tactful in omitting to consider them. The country will draw its own conclusions. In my judgment this conclusion will be with the President."

Gardiner Is Silent.

New York, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—William Howard Gardiner, president of the Navy League of the United States, who started the controversy over President Hoover's naval policy, remained silent in the matter tonight.

As Washington digested the report of Mr. Hoover's committee, which found Mr. Gardiner's assertion that the President had an "abysmal ignorance" of naval affairs, was based on inaccuracies and "erroneous conclusions," Mr. Gardiner at his home here said he had no statement to make at present.

He might or he might not issue a statement later, but for the present, he said, he would stand on his brief comment last night that "It would not be proper for me to make any extemporaneous comment in the present circumstances."

His statement last night also said, "Regard for the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth * * * constrains me to speak only after due deliberation on such a vital subject as the national security."

Y. W. C. A. RESERVES SEEK BROKEN TOYS

Shop Repairs Playthings and and Makes Them Presentable for Poor Children.

The Christmas Toy Shop, conducted annually by the Girl Reserves of the Y. W. C. A., opened Saturday for the receiving of toys, books, dolls, games and other prizes of children, at the Y. W. C. A. Building at Seventeenth and K streets.

The members of the Girl Reserves will repair, repaint and otherwise put in good condition all the gifts that are received and on Christmas Eve will deliver them to the orphanages, hospitals, homes and associated charities.

The Toy Shop was organized five years ago and has grown larger each year. The first year 1,500 toys were given away and each year about 900 more gifts were added and last year the total number given away was 4,000, and it required nearly 8,000 toys to make this many good ones.

Miss Elsa Peterson, chairman of the Toy Shop, has broadcast an appeal for all people that have toys to spare to call Metropolitan 2102, the Girl Reserve office, and the toys will be called for.

The committee under Miss Peterson's chairmanship is comprised of Mrs. Harry Norment, Mrs. Arthur T. Upson, Mrs. William M. Ritter, Mrs. Harry H. Blee, Mrs. George Gardner, Mrs. K. W. Burnett, Mrs. George W. Padgett, Miss Lois Spencer, Miss Thais Spencer, Miss Katherine Burnett, Miss Henrietta Goodner, Miss Margaret Hedgcock, Miss Alma Swope and Miss Cynthia Willard.

Death Investigated In ReligiousColony

Police Refuse to Accept "Disobedience of God" as Legal Cause.

Oroville, Calif., Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Unwilling to accept "disobedience of God" as a legal cause for death, Butte County authorities tomorrow will hold an autopsy on Martin Jordan, 50, member of the Brother Isaiah Colony near here, who died Friday.

Brother Isaiah, the leader, signed the man's death certificate and gave the cause as that "he disobeyed God." The members of the colony claim immortality, and said Jordan had transgressed on the rules of the colony and of God as fixed by Brother Isaiah.

While authorities were inclined to believe the man's death was from natural causes, since he had come to the colony from Louisiana in August to be healed of a persistent illness, the investigation is to make sure that he did not die by force.

U. S. Students Declared Lacking Responsibility

New York, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—E. R. Murrow, president of the National Student Federation of America, asserted today that American students "have as yet no consciousness of unity or of responsibility to the community."

Commenting upon the annual report of the federation, he said economic conditions are leading to increasing "jealousy, hatred and intense nationalism" among European students. He added that if adverse conditions continued long enough, a student movement might grow up here parallel in influence and strength to those of post-war Europe.

BOND ISSUES CALLED BOOST TO STRENGTH

Ferris Says Bankers May Be Able to Avert Slumps by Watching Securities.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Nov. 8 (A.P.).—In the perennial strength of the bond issues of Federal and local governments, Henry T. Ferris, president of the Investment Bankers Association, today found the fullest measure of the basic strength of this country and its business structure.

Mr. Ferris, addressing the association's convention, said, "The vision of the new era has sunk into complete eclipse," but that, making all allowances for the strained economic condition, "we must conclude that ignorance and blind fear, leading almost to panic, have caused the wholesale sacrifice of many securities at prices which today seem wholly unjustified by actual events."

At the same time, the association's foreign securities committee issued a report asserting that sacrifice of foreign securities by American investors is not warranted despite the fall in their market values.

Present values are not indicative of basic values, it said, since hysteria has brought about an almost complete demoralization of the foreign bond market.

Mr. Ferris attacked the lenient credit policy followed in the years of exceptional prosperity, adding that investment and other bankers, by watching closely the real merits of securities, may prevent further periods of deflation.

The report officially announced an extension of the work of the Institute of International Finance, which, "since the present prices do not reflect truly" foreign bond values, will attempt to present from time to time "for the purpose of protecting American holders of foreign securities, comprehensive reports on defaulting countries and on countries publicly known to be experiencing financial difficulties, in order to inform bondholders of the intrinsic value of their securities."

The report emphasized that while a country may be forced to default due to economic conditions, such country virtually never will totally abandon its obligations.

Turkey to Bare Mosaics LongVeiled From Public

Berlin, Nov. 8 (U.P.).—The Turkish government has finally agreed to the uncovering of the famous mosaics in the great mosque of Sophia, hidden since 1453, according to a dispatch from Istanbul to the Vossische Zeitung.

The mosaics were covered with plaster, nearly five centuries ago, because the code of Islam forbade the depicting of any human figure. The pictures are 1,400 years old, and considered among the foremost treasures of Old World art.

CARAWAY'S REMAINS ARRIVE AT OLD HOME

Wife Suggested as Senator to Fill Unexpired Term From Arkansas.

Jonesboro, Ark., Nov. 8 (A.P.).—The body of Senator T. H. Caraway arrived here tonight and along streets lined with hundreds of persons was borne to his home to await funeral services and burial tomorrow.

A company of Arkansas National Guardsmen formed an escort to the Caraway home.

Mrs. Caraway left the train at Roxie and came by motor to Jonesboro to be at the home when the body reached there and when her three sons, Robert, Paul and Forrest, arrived from Washington.

A military guard of honor remained at the Caraway home during the night.

Flags throughout the city were at halfstaff.

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 8 (A.P.).—As Arkansas prepared tonight to pay final tribute to Senator Thaddeus H. Caraway, whose funeral will be held tomorrow morning in Jonesboro, the opinion was advanced in many quarters that his widow, Mrs. Hattie Caraway, might be named to serve his unexpired term.

Precedent for such action on the part of the State Democratic central committee was established in the cases of two Arkansas representatives, W. A. Oldfield and Otis Wingo, whose widows were selected as their successors. A special election must be held within the next 120 days, but it will be largely a formality as the Democratic nomination, which may be made by the State committee or in a primary, is equivalent to election. Several political leaders have been mentioned as prospective candidates in addition to Mrs. Caraway.

The body of Arkansas' fiery junior senator, whose unexpected death Friday night followed by a week an operation for a kidney ailment, lay in state in the rotunda of the capitol today with a military guard of honor. Tonight it was being borne by train back to northeast Arkansas, where the man who represented this State in the national Senate and House for eighteen years had lived nearly half a century.

Accompanying the body to Jonesboro besides the widow were his congressional colleagues from Arkansas and a few friends. Nearly all State officials and hundreds of other persons were expected to attend the funeral.

A special congressional delegation, including Senator James Watson, of Indiana, Republican leader, will arrive in Jonesboro early tomorrow.

Fight in Rum Raid Is Fatal to Youth

Denver Victim Allegedly Was Struck by U. S. Prohibition Agent.

Denver, Colo., Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Melford G. Smith, 20, died today from a fractured skull, alleged to have been inflicted by Henry Dierks, Federal prohibition agent, during a raid.

John F. Vivian, Federal district prohibition administrator, said Smith was injured during a fight over possession of a bottle of wine the youth threw from a hamburger stand with the entry of the officers. No charges have been filed in connection with the death.

A. L. Green, 41, an uncle of Smith, was declared to have been struck over the head by the agent.

RASKOB BARES PLAN FOR PARTY'S FUNDS

will serve as temporary vice commanders until permanent officers are elected at a convention here on Jefferson's birthday, next April 13.

A board of councilors will elect members immediately from among 3,000 men and women whose names have been suggested by Democratic members of Congress, governors, national committeemen and other party leaders. Other names will be submitted later.

Councilors appointed until the Jefferson Day meeting are James M. Cox, John W. Davis, Alfred E. Smith, all former party nominees for the Presidency; Mrs. Ross, Mrs. Jessie Woodrow Sayre, Mrs. O. Max Gardner, Byrd, Shouse, John H. Fahey and A. Scott Bullitt. Raskob will be an ex officio member.

Charles Michelson, publicity director of the national committee, will serve as temporary secretary of the organization, and James W. Gerard as temporary treasurer. Headquarters will be at the national committee's offices in Washington.

In the letter Raskob said the Democratic party "now has an aggressive, fighting, national organization which has kept the Republican party continually on the defensive during the whole of the present administration."

Membership in the organization, he added, is limited to those who are willing to give "time, money and militant service" to the party.

U. S. HALTS TERROR REIGN IN MILK WAR

burned or driven into ditches. One driver was shot and scores were beaten.

Several barns on dairy farms were mysteriously burned. More than 100 farmers were arrested in the three Illinois counties where the trouble centered.

E. W. Tiedmann, president of the producers association, repeatedly demanded that the violence be stopped. Armed guards were placed on trucks. The milk company daily threatened legal action.

But it was not until last week when the Federal Government—through Judge Fitzhenry—entered the case in earnest that the disorders ceased. The Federal judge told the rioters what they must not do, and what would happen if they disobeyed.

"We have here an unparalleled record of anarchy and crime," the judge said. "I hereby make permanent an injunction restraining all parties from further violence. Any one who violates it must deal with the United States Government."

There has been no violence since that time, except for two instances on the day following issuance of the injunction, before news of the writ had reached throughout the district. If the quiet does not continue, it has been indicated, martial law may be the ultimate solution.

HARRY M. WURZBACH IS BURIED IN TEXAS

20,000 Admirers Pay Tribute to Republican Representative at Bier.

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Harry M. Wurzbach, the lone Republican, who for five terms broke the usually solid Texas Democratic front in the House of Representatives, was buried here today as 20,000 admirers paid tribute.

The great popularity he enjoyed in life was manifest in death. From the mesquite covered grazing land of the plains, the cosmopolitan population of the "City of the Alamo," and the fertile farm land of his district came the great outpouring of friends.

Many of the estimated 15,000 persons who passed the late representative's bier in the Municipal Auditorium journed hundreds of miles to be present. They included numerous men of national prominence.

St. Mark's Episcopal Church, where funeral services were held, was filled to overflowing long before the ceremonies started.

Seats were reserved for relatives, the Army delegation headed by Maj. Gen. Edwin B. Winans and Brig. Gen. Halstead Dorey, visiting members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives, and an escort of veterans.

At the National Cemetery, where the body was laid to rest with full military honors, the crowd was estimated at 20,000 persons.

United States Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, represented the Senate at the service. Other members of the delegation appointed Saturday by Vice President Curtis to attend the funeral were unable to reach San Antonio.

Senator Connally made a brief statement, declaring that the late Representative Wurzbach was "a useful and able public servant" and that while differing from him in politics he had always entertained for him a high personal regard.

Wurzbach, a veteran of the Spanish-American War, died Friday following complications arising from an appendicitis operation. He was a native son of San Antonio, and was first elected to Congress in 1920. He was 57 years old.

No action has been taken toward selecting his successor in Congress. A special election may be held before Congress convenes December 7.

Wilson War-Time Board Reunites Armistice Day

New York, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—The United States War Industries Board, created by President Wilson as his "right arm and his right eye," will hold a reunion in New York on Armistice Day. About 150 former members will attend, it was announced today by Herbert Bayard Swope, who will preside.

It will be the seventh time the war workers have met. Foremost among the subjects up for discussion is the economic situation.

France to Buy Jugoslavian Grain.

Belgrade, Jugoslavia, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—France has signed an agreement to purchase 10 per cent of her requirements of grain from Jugoslavia, it was announced today. The grain to be purchased in Jugoslavia amounts to 15,000 carloads.

GOVERNMENT COST SCORED BY RITCHIE

Maryland Governor, in Radio Address, Deplores U. S. Going Into Business.

No provision in the Constitution even remotely contemplates the Government engaging in business, and yet the Government not only is engaging in business itself, but is interfering with business to an extent which is amazing and appalling, Gov Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland declared yesterday in a radio address sponsored by the Sentinels of the Republic.

Gov. Ritchie pointed out that he did not refer to instances like railroads, "where growth and development have made governmental regulation inevitable," but rather "to the habit of constantly looking to Washington for aid and subsidies and subventions, and to the laws too numerous to mention, which, on the one hand, overfavor business, and on the other overregulation."

In his address, which was broadcast over a Nation-wide network by the National Broadcasting Co., Gov. Ritchie declared that the Government is in business itself "as monopolist, competitor and adventurer" in at least 100 distinct lines.

Cites U. S. Business.

"Some of this," he said, "may be necessary, but on the whole these things have brought a system of bureaucracy which comes very near to tyranny. The army of officeholders grows over five times as fast as the population, and our Government becomes steadily the most costly, wasteful and extravagant on the face of the earth.

"And the end is not yet; there are still unexploited fields—child and adult labor, education, the producer, the merchandiser, the consumer, the farmer and the press. A live bureaucracy will be glad to bring them all under its jurisdiction."

Gov. Ritchie added that while he believes business should be as free and unharrassed and unhampered by government as possible, yet he recognizes that it can not be entirely free; in some respects the supervising hand of government is necessary for public welfare.

Declaring that monopoly may be preferable to competition, he said that "big business may be more economical than little business. Enforcing artificial competition may be more costly to the consumer than combination. If big business can produce at less cost, production in the most economical places, can avoid duplication and waste, utilize by-products, cheapen distribution, balance supply and demand, and establish other advantages claimed for it, then obviously big business should be encouraged for the common good."

State's Responsibility.

He urged, however, that supervision of business was the responsibility of the individual States rather than of the Federal Government.

"Business," he said, "and big business particularly, should work to leave to the States what the States can do better or as well as the central government. The best political and best economic security business can have today is to keep political power diversified. An active and belligerent propaganda may stampede a given Congress into passing laws ruinous to business. I believe you never can stampede all the States into doing so.

"I refuse," he concluded, "to believe that the intelligence of the country can not see that business prosperity must rest on a sounder basis than political favoritism or inspired guidance or interference from Washington. Business should look to and trust the States and their people, as the sources from which its strength and safety spring, and as the arch security of our governmental structure, and the central government should not block the way."

18,000 to Pay Tribute To Crane on Funeral

Chicago, Nov. 8, (A.P.).—Eighteen thousand employes in 175 plants of the Crane Co. throughout the world will suspend work Wednesday during the funeral of Richard Teller Crane, jr., president of the company, who died in New York yesterday.

Howard P. Bishop, his secretary, who made the announcement, said the workmen in that manner hoped to express their appreciation of the numerous philanthropies they received from the noted industrialist. During the last six years he distributed among them $12,000,000 in the company's stock from his private fortune.

Bottle William Tell Act With Gun Is Fatal

Lester, Iowa, Nov. 8 (U.P.).—"All right, William Tell, let's see you shoot it off," said James Dickinson, placing a bottle on his head.

"Okay, but it's a bottle and not an apple," replied George Marnett, who took another drink, raised his pistol and pulled the trigger.

He missed the bottle. Dickinson, a 40-year-old garage worker, was killed. Marnett, 36, known as a crack pistol shot, was taken to Rock Rapids and charged with murder. Witnesses said they were close friends and that both were intoxicated.

Gutenberg Bible Sold at $100,000

London Collector Acquires Copy of Famed Book at Auction.

London, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—News that a private collector had purchased at auction for considerably more than $100,000 a paper copy of the prized Gutenberg Bible, of which only 41 copies are known to exist, astounded London's book world today.

The volume was understood to have reposed in the Continental Library for more than a century and to be in splendid condition. A paper edition of the Bible sold in New York a short time ago for $106,000, and a real vellum copy for $50,000.

The Gutenberg Bible was the first book produced from movable type, and required five years to complete. It is praised for the beauty and strength of its paper, the luster of its ink, the boldness of its Gothic type and its superb binding.

Leave of Absence Granted to Quezon

President of Filipino Senate Planning Return to U. S. Next Year.

Manila, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Manuel Quezon was granted an eight months' leave of absence as president of the insular Senate and as head of the Nationalist party today because of ill health. Quezon, who returned a few weeks ago from the United States, plans to go to America again next year after other members of the Philippine Independence Commission have left.

Quezon's report of independence negotiations with congressional leaders was presented to the nationalist caucus. It will be presented to a joint session of the Legislature tomorrow.

Although it was not made public, Quezon said three plans had been evolved. The first provides for immediate independence with restricted free trade and immigration for ten years; the second provides broad autonomy under American sovereignty with a plebiscite at the end of ten years on the question of independence. The third would be independence in any other form.

NOTABLES USE RADIO TO AID RELIEF DRIVE

Pershing, Lindbergh, Cobb, Mary Pickford and Mrs. Norris Talk.

New York, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Mary Pickford, Charles A. Lindbergh, Gen. John J. Pershing, Irvin S. Cobb and Mrs. Kathleen Norris joined tonight in radio appeals to the people of America for support of President Hoover's organization on unemployment relief.

"We must all move quickly," the screen star said, "to help our neighbors and preserve our own self-respect. Believe me, what we do for others in these crises of life comes back to us not a hundred fold, but a thousand. • • • •

"I have learned from my own contacts that people are not cold hearted; they are sympathetic, warm hearted. When some one is hurt in the studio and we see it, three or four times as much is subscribed as is asked for.

"But we are thoughtless and sometimes when we do not actually see, we procrastinate. I know I do. That is why I want you to see with me those millions of outstretched arms. Won't you talk this over among yourselves—in your own home—tonight, and decide to do—now—your very utmost for those in your community who so desperately need your help?"

Lindbergh Sees Response As Test.

Col. Lindbergh referred to himself as "an individual who has devoted most of his time to the technical phases of aviation.'

He said:

"We have an overproduction of food and manufactured products together with unemployment and lack of purchasing power. In short, we have both the luxuries of life and time to make use of them without the system which permits necessary distribution.

"We are passing through another period of adjustment. When we emerge it must be on a foundation stronger than before. A system must be developed in which science and production methods will contribute to individual welfare instead of unemployment.

"We have in this country all that is necessary for the welfare of every individual. We can and no doubt will survive the present crisis. Our great test is how we emerge. Our future depends today on individual recognition of responsibility."

Fear Psychology Blamed.

Mrs. Norris said fear psychology is at the base of much of the world's present troubles. She said Americans should do all in their power to banish the fears of their neighbors and cheer them into an optimistic state of activity, both with material assistance and encouraging sympathy.

She asked the audience to "give 10,000,000 extra gifts this Christmas in an effort to blow out the flame of our hard times."

"Make out your lists tonight," she urged; "even if it's only a postcard, a receipted milk bill, a good Christmas dinner. A half-million of you, each giving 20 extra gifts, little and big, home-made or purchased.

"Just how many factories those 20 times 500,000 gifts would reopen, just how many women they would put back at their jobs, just how many shops and stores and restaurants would profit by the incoming flood of business, we can not calculate, but work it out for yourselves."

"Live Like Americans"—Pershing.

She said she got the idea from two girls—poor girls—with whom she rode on a train. They said they were going to do it and in their cases it would mean 40 lengths of ribbon, 40 cards, 40 wrapping papers and 40 gifts, most of which would be either home-made or cost only about 10 cents apiece.

Gen. Pershing said "millions of honest, hard-working people are fighting idleness and want through no fault of their own and losing out. They need backing, as did the allies in 1917."

"If tomorrow America should call for men to die for her," he added, "as she did in the World War, millions would volunteer. But this call is not for sacrifice of life; it is to give life. You are summoned to live like Americans and to see that your neighbors live like Americans—strong and unafraid.

"You can not afford to fail. You will not fail. You will give and give freely. You will go forward in pride and self-respect to victory, again to see our people enjoy prosperity, comfort and happiness."

Pittsburgh, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, spoke here today at a mass meeting sponsored by the churches of Pittsburgh in interest of the current campaign to raise funds for relief of unemployed and needy.

Mr. Mellon lauded particularly the so-called "Pittsburgh plan" for the mitigation of unemployment. Under this plan, which operated here last winter and is being attempted again this year, persons in a position financially to do so contribute money for public improvements to be carried out by those who otherwise would be unemployed. Materials and supervision for the improvements are furnished by the municipality. The plan is independent of the usual "welfare fund" for relief of the needy.

The Pittsburgh plan, Mr. Mellon said, "confers a double benefit on the community, for it not only makes possible needed improvements and provides employment but at the same time helps to maintain that self-respect which is so essential if people who are able and willing to work are to be spared the bitter experience of receiving money for which no compensating labor has been given."

Of the unemployed, he said:

"We owe it to them, and more especially we owe it to ourselves, to see them through their difficulties until better times return again, as return they will."

Frederick H. Payne, Assistant Secretary of War, accompanied Mr. Mellon to Pittsburgh and spoke briefly at the mass meeting.

French Army and Warships Confront Corsican Bandits

Troops With Mountain Batteries and Armored Cars Will Launch Drive to Annihilate Bands Which Have Flourished for Century.

Ajaccio, Corsica, Nov. 8 (U.P.).—French forces, including 600 troops equipped with mountain batteries and 10 armored cars, backed by two warships standing by in this port, were thrown into position today to launch an offensive designed to annihilate the last of Corsica's notorious bandit gangs.

All mountain passes were barricaded and troops were stationed at sniping posts to meet the bandits with their own method of warfare, while the warships were ready to shell any ships in which the gangs might attempt to escape.

A second contingent of troops was reported leaving for Corsica from Marseilles tonight and a massed attack on the bandit retreats was expected to begin tomorrow afternoon.

Latest victory for the government was announced today in killing of the notorious leader Santoni, who was ambushed and shot by local gendarmes.

The French forces are largely mounted men, carrying machine guns. The government cloaked the purposes of the expedition in the utmost secrecy and all troops sailing from Marseilles were under sealed orders.

The drive to clean up Corsica is the result of determination by the government to wipe out a sore spot that has existed more than a century. From their strongholds in the mountains, where local police dared not pursue them, it was the custom of bandit gangs to descend upon farmers and tradespeople, levying tribute upon them and sometimes sacking a village if their demands were not obeyed.

Recently some of the bandit feuds have developed into night battles with heavy and promiscuous firing in which tourists have been endangered.

PAYNE MAKES PLEA FOR RED CROSS AID

Burdens of Impending Winter to Be Heavier, He Says Over Radio.

(Associated Press.)

Chairman John Barton Payne last night broadcast a plea for contributions to the American Red Cross so it may continue to take aid to the stricken.

"I want to remind you that the Red Cross burdens which have been so very heavy threaten to become even heavier," he said. "Drought's effect lingers. The economic situation is adding to the load.

"Even as I speak, more than 1,000 of our chapters are engaged in family relief work. At this very moment we are giving aid to victims of still another devastating drought in Montana and North Dakota.

"Winter with its certain hardships impends. No one can foresee the problems it will precipitate. We must be ready for them."

Explaining that the fiftieth anniversary roll call begins on Armistice Day, next Wednesday, and continues until Thanksgiving Day, Mr. Payne added:

"We must have millions of additional members if we are to make the national festival truly an occasion for thanksgiving.

"Working with the cooperative courtesy of the Disabled Veterans of the World War, our chapters are now undertaking to contact and afford work or relief to the unemployed disabled veteran.

"The Red Cross is sending to each chapter the names of unemployed veterans living within its jurisdiction. These are to be given relief through the chapter or through the appropriate local agency. The chapter will not be content merely to refer the case and then forget it. Employment or other forms of help must be provided.

"You need the Red Cross, the Red Cross needs you. Even more important, there are millions of unfortunate fellow citizens who hang upon your action. What happens to them depends largely upon how generously and promptly you respond."

EXPERTS FORM PLAN FOR HELPING SILVER

"There can be no doubt that a relative stability of the silver price would materially contribute toward a gradual opening of the interior of China to trade."

The total annual production of silver was estimated for this year at less than 200,000,000 ounces, valued at $56,000,000.

The experts said the "larger proportion is at present controlled by a few corporations in America who, if they had a working agreement with the Indian treasury, giving all participants a reasonable quota of world sales, should be capable of keeping silver at a fair price to both buyer and sellers so long as they supply the market with judgment."

VIRGINIAN ARRESTED AS FORTUNE TELLER

Norfolk Man, Wife and Secretary Called "Pretenders," in New York.

New York, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Under circumstances which caused the court to order all papers in the case sealed, three persons were held in $500 bail today on a charge of "pretending to tell fortunes."

The trio—Edgar Cayce, 54; Mrs. Gertrude Cayce, 51, his wife, and Gladys Davis, 26, their blonde secretary—were arrested when detectives raided their hotel rooms. Cayce told police his home was in Virginia Beach, Va.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Edgar Cayce, arrested in New York on a charge of "pretending to tell fortunes," was widely known in this section as a "psychic diagnostician" and lecturer. He is a former member of the Atlantic University Board of Trustees.

Until some time ago he was head of the hospital bearing his name at Virginia Beach. The hospital, owned by a corporation known as the National Investigators, was closed early in the year and recently sold.

Cayce in various statements made here claimed to possess the power to go into a trance and diagnose illnesses of patients brought to the Cayce Hospital and they were treated by regular physicians. He never claimed to be a healer.

He attracted wide attention and patients care here from distant points to have their ailments diagnosed. Cayce asserted that he had refused to use his psychic gift for material gain, such as giving advance information as to financial matters, the stock market and so forth. His diagnoses of illnesses were dictated while he was in a trance, he said.

Cayce has been a resident of Virginia Beach for several years. His friends said he came here from Kentucky.

22 STARVING MEN RESCUED FROM SHIP

from their courses to aid the stricken ship. The Admiral Watson, the Cascade, the tanker Arizona and the Admiral Nulton were among those who attempted to help.

Considerable difficulty was experienced in locating the ship in the dense fog because her radio became crippled and she was unable to give radio bearings. Later her whistles also stopped as water crept into her engine room. None of the steamers, however, could venture near enough to render assistance as the Munleon was held on rocks only 50 feet from shore.

Coast Guard vessels soon arrived and in spite of the stiff northwestern blowing succeeded in transferring the crew, with two crushed fingers being the total injuries.

The Munleon, a vessel of 1,615 tons, left here last night for Portland carrying 800 tons of freight. The place where the vessel struck has been the scene of many fatal wrecks. Recent victims of the reefs included the tanker Richfield and the steam schooner Hartwood.

Crew Rescues Two Cats.

Except for the helmsman, the third mate, the lookout and engine room shift, the crew was asleep when the ship struck.

"She hit with such force that it almost threw us from our bunks," said I. R. Miller, Portland, second assistant engineer. "I ran to the engine room to open safety valves so the boilers would not explode. By the time I reached there the engine room was under 2 feet of water."

With all the men off the vessel some one remembered the ship's two mascots, "Nigger," a coal black cat, and "Fluffs," a bushy-tailed angora. In spite of protests of Coast Guardsmen several of the men put back, went aboard and added the cats to the survivors aboard the Shawnee.

Man Dies as Schooner Sinks.

Provincetown, Mass., Nov. 8 (A.P.). The two-masted schooner Irving J. Luce, of Gloucester, sank in the treacherous race rip tide off Provincetown late today, sending one man to his death, a few minutes after a Coast Guard vessel had towed it off a shoal. The other three members of the crew were rescued.

Deal, England (Monday), Nov. 9 (U.P.).—A fleet of thirteen tugs succeeded in refloating the steamer Hybert, stranded outside this habror, at 12:45 a. m. today. The Hybert proceeded to Dover.

A lifeboat from Walmer, which stood by the Hybert for 53 hours, returned to port this afternoon, its crew reporting their duty as "the severest experience of their lives."

'ECONOMIC FAILURE' OF U. S. IS ASSAILED

Catholic Prelate, in Sermon at Richmond Celebration, Hits Social Unrest.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 8 (A.P.).—In the opening sermon of a two-day joint celebration of Sacred Heart Cathedral, and the dedication of a million dollar orphanage here, Archbishop John J. Glennon today told a great gathering of the Roman Catholic hierarchy that America had both conquered and failed in the economic struggle following the World War.

The St. Louis archbishop described the postwar economic conditions as the second war, and said that America had reached economic heights but had failed at the same time because there "was none left to carry on the economic struggle."

"The nations of the world were too poor to trade with us, and so left us to hold the world's gold and our wheat crops and corn and the mass production of our industry," he said. "We excluded them by our tariffs and they shut us out of their tariff walls from resuming what we needed so badly."

Largest Southern Gathering.

The archbishop said this "mad rush for world trade" and "crimes committed against social justice at home" were the causes for "social unrest and demand for readjustment."

The services today were opened with the solemn pontifical mass, with its elaborate ritual, nearly 2,000 years old. The occasion brought to Richmond what was called "the largest gathering of the Catholic hierarchy ever held in the South."

In the procession at the huge cathedral were more than 40 priests, each acting as a guard of honor to a bishop, three abbots and the Most Rev. Pietro Fumasoni-Biondi, apostolic delegate to the United States. They were followed by the Right Rev. A. J. Brennan, Bishop of Richmond; the Most Rev. M. J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore, and others.

The sermon was preached by the Most Rev. John J. Glennon, Archbishop of St. Louis, the only surviving prelate of the group who participated in the dedication of the cathedral a quarter of a century ago. His text was "And the day shall be to you for a memorial." He gave what he called "A crystallization of past events." Eulogizing Jefferson and Washington as men who gave civil liberty to Virginia and the Nation, and praising Marylanders who stood for the religious freedom, he stressed the inalienable rights of man to freedom.

Man's Rights Are Superior.

When the "ite missa est" had been sung, the venerable archbishop said: "In every home, in every face and on every street corner there are today's reminders to us that we should harken to the voice of justice and of truth, telling us that the rights of man are superior to the rights of property, and to labor to get together for human welfare, in defense of human rights."

Quickly sketching the history of the prelates who have made Catholic history both in the cathedral and in the Catholic world, the archbishop mentioned there have been two wars in the past 25 years.

"America, with its associated nations, conquered, and then it failed," he said. "It conquered the enemy and broke his power, but it failed in reaching the objective for which it fought. For the democracy which it preached has since then almost disappeared from the world. In its place bureaucracy, dictatorship and force control a broken world."

He said the second war was an economic war, which followed the military battles.

Moving of Big Tree Will Cost $5,000

Giant Magnolia's Removal Necessitated by Mall Improvement.

The moving of a giant magnolia tree in the Mall to prepare for road construction in a $100,000 improvement program will cost the Government nearly $5,000.

Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant yesterday signed a contract with the Westcott Nursery Co., of Falls Church, Va., for the moving of 31 trees and the cutting down of 60 standing in the way of the road development. He accepted an additional bid of $4,947 for the moving of the magnolia.

The tree is 36 inches in circumference and will be moved 400 feet from its present location near the fill in the Mall to near Foutreenth street. The operation will involve the moving of a disk of earth 35 feet in diameter, 5 feet thick, and weighing about 300 tons.

DIVORCE CRITICIZED BY BISHOP OF BRAZIL

Preaching in Rock Creek Church, Urges Nation to Pass Marriage Reforms.

"If the people in the United States were required to give sufficient public notice of intention to marry, and these sudden, hasty, ill-advised marriages stopped, I think a step in the right direction would be accomplished in the solution of the divorce evil," said the Right Rev. William M. M. Thomas, Bishop of Southern Brazil, preaching yesterday morning at the Rock Creek Episcopal Church.

The bishop went on to say that the United States could look with profit to Brazil for model divorce laws. "In Brazil," he said, "there are national laws on marriage."

During his sermon the bishop told of progress of the work of the church in southern Brazil. He said that his diocese in territorial extent was as large as the thirteen original colonies, and that making his regular calls to some of the missions it often became necessary to travel upward of 400 miles on muleback, accompanied by pack trains. He told of the opportunities for service in Brazil, and related how on numerous occasions lack of manpower and money rendered the church helpless to answer calls for service in distant parts of the country.

Believes Vargas Honest.

Commenting briefly after his sermon on the current political situation in Brazil, Bishop Thomas said, "My impression of Dr. Getulio Vargas, provisional president of Brazil, is that he is honestly trying to work out for the Brazilian people a stable form of government. This will be an exceedingly difficult task on account of the prevailing corruption of the political regime overthrown in October of last year," he went on.

"In a recent conversation with Dr. Vargas he assured me that he and his party had tried to realize the ideals for which they are contending by pacific means and that when all such attempts had failed they were reluctantly compelled to resort to arms in order to overthrow the past government," the bishop said.

Revolt Seen as Credit.

"I think that his carefully planned revolution, which did in fact voice the opinions of most Brazilians and resulted in an overwhelming victory with an irreducible minimum of bloodshed, was much to his credit. I do not believe that Dr. Vargas was seeking personal aggrandizement in the revolt," he concludde.

Bishop Thomas is a native of Mattapany, Md., and a graduate of Virginia Theological Seminary in 1904. He was ordained in 1905 in Brazil, serving as a professor in the Theological School in Rio Grande do Sul for five years. In 1922 he became head master of the Southern Cross School at Porto Alegre, which post he held until his election to the Episcopate in 1925.

PUBLIC COOPERATION ASKED FOR CHARITY

Father Shehan Tells Radio Audience of Winter Task of Relief Faced.

An appeal for the confidence and cooperation of the public in carrying on social welfare work this winter was made yesterday by the Rev. Dr. Lawrence J. Shehan, assistant director of Catholic Charities, in an address at the Washington Catholic radio hour.

Without this aid, it will be impossible to work effectively, Father Shehan said. Declaring that there is no considerable fund available for outdoor relief work other than the mother's allowance, the speaker announced that the generosity of the people of Washington is being counted on to make efficient work possible. To care adequately for the needs of the coming winter, more money will be needed than ever before, he added.

During the present year, approximately $45,000 will be expended for direct family relief, representing money going directly into the homes of the poor, the charity director said. "Years will be spent in restoring the wreckage of the disastrous period through which we have passed, and this means that a great responsibility remains with organizations engaged in the fiold of social welfare," Father Shehan predicted.

Father Hurney presided at the service which was broadcast over station WOL from the Church of the Immaculate Conception. The service included the blessing of the sick at the Grotto of Our Lady of Lourdes in the church. Miss Florence Yocum and Miss Mary Frances Glenn were soloists.

NO HOLIDAY FOR POLITICS.

As the time draws near for Congress to reassemble talk of a political "moratorium" is revived. Hope is expressed in various quarters that politics will be laid aside and that the two major parties will cooperate for the general welfare. It is well for every one who indulges in such a hope to do his promotion work now, before the opening session brings disillusionment.

It might not be difficult to obtain a promise from Democratic party leaders that they would cooperate in the promotion of measures for the good of the country. But what the two parties consider for the good of the country on the eve of a presidential election is so radically different that such a pledge would mean nothing. The Democrats are convinced that the best thing for the United States would be the election of a Democratic President and Congress in 1932, and they may be expected to devote all their energy toward that end.

A year ago a group of Democratic leaders signed a truce with President Hoover. They were accused of disloyalty to their own party, and in the end they had to launch a caustic attack upon the administration to prove that they remained loyal to their own party. Agreements for cooperation between the parties always lead to misunderstanding, and usually result in more dissension than harmony. The only way in which two antagonistic parties can work in a semblance of harmony is for them to be able to say that they have made no bargains.

It may be assumed that the Democrats will lay before the country some of the policies on which their 1932 platform will be based. Especially if the Democrats organize the House, they will assume a direct responsibility for the legislation they propose to enact. Any request that they defer those plans and cooperate in a program satisfactory to Republican leaders might produce serious repercussions. With a general election in the offing Democrats will not dare openly to support the opposition party.

Since there is no chance of ruling politics out of the approaching session of Congress, it would be a more sagacious plan to direct partisan energies into constructive channels. If the administration recommends to Congress a constructive program that commands the support of the people, the Democratic representatives in Congress will be slow to oppose it. If they are not bound by agreement to compromise their own party's program, they will be able to vote for such measures without casting any suspicion upon their loyalty. Under no circumstances will there be a chance of enacting controversial measures without a positive showdown of party strength.

There is no crisis in the United States that calls for government by coalition. Every indication points to a steady recovery from the depression. Congress has done little to turn the tide, and it will hardly do much to keep the tide from rising. Much of the energy of responsible members will be devoted to sidetracking radical measures. At best the Seventy-second Congress will be a hotbed of politics, but there is no reason why partisanship should be intensified by an attempt to tie the parties together.

NEEDS OF EDUCATION.

Better education and more of it is essential in protecting this country against its own ignorance and follies, for what is done in the public schools determines what the Nation will be. In his address before the annual Education Congress Secretary Wilbur thus stressed the need of revising old educational ideas. The American public school system, he said, is an outstanding achievement of democracy. The great structure has been reared at tremendous public expense. The educators' task is now to make this system yield dividends in the form of effective training for citizenship.

Education has gone steadily forward, Secretary Wilbur states, yet the recent census shows that illiteracy is prevalent in every State. There are large gaps in the educational machinery, and methods have been inadequate in many places. Educational workers have discovered newer and better methods, but as Mr. Average Citizen is represented on all the school boards he is apt to have a traditional attitude of suspicion regarding any new procedure. This is unfortunate in a period when great changes are necessary to train children in the customs and habits of modern life.

Education no longer comprises the entire training of American youth, for health, recreation and education now go hand in hand. The training of a boy or girl should promote growth in capacity, knowledge, mental and physical strength, and sound citizenship. The great objectives should be development of individuality and spirituality, and the preservation of human dignity. The best students should be given greater opportunities and should not be held to the average level. This specialization will benefit all types and help to produce more leaders.

This republic guides its course by decisions made at the polls where the actual majority determines the issue. For this reason it is essential that the great mass of men and women be properly trained to exercise this responsibility. Interested and informed citizens who know how to cooperate are needed in the intricate task of government, economic and social life. Majorities can be wrong, but if the schools properly train the youth of America in the problems of citizenship there need be no fear for the continued success of popular government.

GOVERNMENT OPERATION.

A review of the opinion of the "Progressive conference" which met here last spring has been presented in the report of the committee on public utilities. Under the leadership of Donald Richberg, this committee has found that the great problems which confront the American people today are "the recapture of public control of all public business and the elimination of private monopolistic control of public necessities." This, the report states, can be done by promoting public operation of public business in competition with privately managed utility companies.

The committee cites the railroad operations of Canada to show how its proposed approach to socialism would work out. It is interesting to note, however, that the committee does not examine the situation of the Dominion lines. At the end of 1929 Canada had invested well over $2,000,000,000 in this enterprise. The earnings for that year amounted to about $33,500,000 without making allowance for depreciation. It is estimated by experts that a moderate charge for depreciation would be $20,000,000. This leaves the "earnings" at no more than $14,000,000, or .7 of 1 per cent on this railroad investment. If no allowance is made for depreciation the earnings amount to only 1.6 per cent. Obviously this can not be considered successful operation. These figures are based on operations of the Government-owned Canadian road during a prosperous year. Even during the depression American privately owned railways are earning 2.08 per cent on their investment.

Mr. Richberg states in the report that the competition should be "fair." That would seem to imply that each type of operation should pay its own way, yet this Government operation would have to be supported out of the people's tax money. Either Mr. Richberg has a distorted opinion of "fair competition" or he is ignorant of the facts concerning the model he sets up for emulation by American public utilities.

It seems incredible that a committee whose business it was to investigate the situation should have so completely overlooked the facts. The relations of the Canadian government to the National Railways are of public record, and even now are a burning issue in Dominion political discussion. The budget speech of Premier Bennett was largely devoted to this question and it is expected that a royal commission will be appointed to study the situation and make recommendations. It would be well for American Socialists to take a glimpse at such facts as these before proposing new tax burdens to support bureaucratic enterprises for the United States.

FINANCIAL LEADERSHIP.

The man who has reorganized the finances and stabilized the currencies of more nations than any other in history pronounces the American gold standard and the American dollar impregnable. Dr. Edwin W. Kemmerer, of Princeton, is a recognized authority upon the financial affairs of nations great and small. In Europe, in China, in South America, his advice has been sought and followed by nearly a score of countries.

In an address before the Advertising Club in New York Prof. Kemmerer said that only the ignorant, the timid or the envious express any fear of a breakdown of the American gold standard. The United States holds the world's largest stock of gold, the greatest amount ever held by a single nation. Following the British suspension of gold redemption and the subsequent circulation of unfounded reports, $700,000,000 in gold was exported from New York, but it constituted only 14 per cent of America's holdings. The United States had been accumulating gold steadily for three years, and the September outflow still left the gold stock as great as it was in January of this year.

Ever since the war, Prof. Kemmerer points out, New York has been gaining on London as a center of international finance. England's suspension of the gold standard and the consequent loss of the pound's stability have given great impetus to America's prestige as a money center. The recent raid on the dollar, led by French bankers, only served to demonstrate the strong position of the American financial system. The American dollar and American credit are stronger for having passed this test. It brought to prominent attention the fact that the Federal Reserve system has gold reserves of more than $1,000,000,000 in excess of all legal requirements. The prompt formation of a $1,000,000,000 credit organization by American bankers shows their willingness and ability to cooperate with the Government to assure a more liquid condition to this country's enormous assets.

In pointing out the great opportunity that is offered the banking interests of the United States to take world leadership, Prof. Kemmerer gives warning that greater knowledge and increased facilities are essential for properly handling this intricate and far-flung business. A hundred years of experience is behind England's international financial dealings, and her banking connections are worldwide. American banks can not afford to enter this field without due preparation, which means the training of more men, the establishment of better facilities for credit information, and close connections with local financial institutions where their own branches are not maintained. American loans and investments abroad today show a heavy percentage of ill-considered operations. Greater care would have prevented unfortunate experiences for both the foreign borrowers and American investors who absorbed their bonds.

ROME'S ENVOY NEXT.

Signor Dino Grandi, foreign minister of Italy, is on the high seas bound for the United States to confer with President Hoover. His coming is welcomed as offering another opportunity for the exchange of good will with an European nation. No breathless suspense awaits the outcome of this visit, however, because there are no vital questions pending between the two governments.

Signor Grandi is no stranger to Washington, having visited the Capital with Count Volpi in 1925 when he came to adjust the debt settlement. This visit started the young envoy upon a study of English and no interpreters will be needed in connection with his official or social conversations here.

While no immediate result of the visit is expected, it will serve to align Italy with the United States and important European nations and maintain her place as a participant in the big questions of the day. Signor Grandi is particularly charged with Rome's greetings and friendly messages, not only to the President, but to Secretary and Mrs. Stimson, who visited Italy in July. The Italian press emphasizes the fact that Italy has no personal ax to grind, but is much interested in disarmament plans, as specifically shown by the Grandi truce proposal recently offered at Geneva and already subscribed to by nearly a score of nations.

The Grandi party, including Signora Grandi and a staff of nine, headed by Augusto Rosso, formerly counsellor of the Italian Embassy here, is due to arrive in New York on October 16 and will come directly to Washington. While in the Capital the usual round of official dinners and receptions by the President and Cabinet members will be extended to the visitors, and at intervals occasion will be found for discussion of world affairs.

Now that his reforestation program has gone over, Gov. Roosevelt can start sawing the planks for his platform and get ready to take the stump.

FARM PROBLEMS

From the Los Angeles Times.

Problems of agriculture will bring forth a good deal of discussion in the coming session of Congress, centered probably upon attempts by radicals to revive the export-debenture and equalization-fee schemes, which, while thoroughly discredited as visionary, impractical plans which could not do as much good as harm, and which must in the long run accentuate the present difficulties of agriculture, still command a political following. Most of this discussion will be for political effect. Sincere and understanding friends of agriculture realize that the Federal Government is doing its utmost already, through the Federal Farm Board law, to help the farmers work out their problems through cooperation, and that any further interference by Congress will not genuinely be in agriculture's interest.

There is a disposition to overstate the problem. Actually, what is called the agricultural problem is a problem of wheat and cotton. Farmers engaged in fruit raising, in dairying, in stock production and in many other lines of agricultural activity, while not as prosperous as they would like or as the Nation would prefer to see them, are not in a hopeless position. But those who depend upon wheat or cotton for a livelihood for the most part have seen the very foundations of their industry, the export markets, cut away from beneath them.

It may be an exaggeration to say that the day of the United States as a major exporter of either wheat or cotton is definitely over. But it is becoming pretty plain that neither wheat nor cotton, produced as the bulk of these commodities have been produced in the past, will ever again dominate the world markets, and that small-scale producers, at any rate, must find some other outlet for their industry. Not only production for export, but also production for the domestic market of these two commodities will definitely and inevitably be done in the near future only by those who are able to cut costs below present average levels, by operating large units with the aid of labor-saving machinery.

Laws against "corporation farming," threatened in some States, will not prevent this outcome. Cooperation between farmers might take advantage of it. The small individual producer can hardly hope to meet this sort of competition. It means a revolution in the agricultural industry so far as the great staples are concerned; but there is the situation.

The Farm Board's unfortunate experiments in price stabilization have had the expected outcome. They could succeed only if production generally was reduced, and it was not reduced. The failure is no fault of the Farm Board's, which saw clearly the nature of the experiments and knew that they were risky, but took a chance that the majority of the producers could be brought to aid the program. But stabilization is only one part, and not the real major part, of the board's plans. Its aid and assistance to cooperative organization is far more important, and that will continue if Congress will leave the Farm Board alone.

Congress, goaded on by politics, may direct the Farm Board to do the impossible. That will not help agriculture, though it may temporarily help some politicians.

THE FUTURE.

Oh, worried man, sweep out thy rooms of woe;
The dust of loss lies thick upon the floor,
It is not failure to have borne a blow,
They only fail who flee to fight no more.

Turn from the past and all that now is gone,
Look to the future and the newborn chance.
Who sits too long his loss to dwell upon
May miss the glorious moment to advance.

Why mourn so long a counterfeit success?
Though fair it seemed, the thing which you have lost,
And once so proudly boasted to possess,
Could not withstand the first harsh touch of frost.

There is a genuine triumph to be gained,
A victory over self, and time, and fear;
A truer conquest which if once attained
Shall never lose its worth or disappear.

Oh, worried man, you have not failed until
You settle back afraid to fight no more.
A false success has broken down, but still
The future holds the better things in store.

Only Those With the Passion to Win Much Have the Ability to Win It.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THOUGH the love of money is the root of all evil, the love of success is the inspiration of all progress and achievement.

Mankind's most useful servants during any period of history are those who are dominated by a selfish passion for wealth, power or renown. The few exceptions are those who achieve great things and find sufficient reward in the consciousness of doing well the work they find to do.

The first great industrialists were kings.

In history books you read praise of this and that monarch who conquered and destroyed his neighbors, but there is occasional brief reference to one whose reign was noted for the building done and the improvements made.

The kind who built cities, dug canals and constructed roads needed the genius of a modern industrial giant. He could force millions of his subjects to work without pay, but the task of feeding them, providing tools and building materials and raising the necessary money without levying greater taxes than his people could bear—all of this required an executive ability and a genius for organization that any modern might envy.

If the modern builders are more efficient, it is because they have greater obstacles to overcome. Instead of levying taxes to pay construction costs, they must earn the money as they go and do it by outwitting competitors. Moreover, they dare not rest on their laurels as a king might do, for the moment they quit going forward they begin to lose ground to a more enterprising rival.

They are selfish men, as all men are, but they are the builders of civilization and without them no building would be done.

You will answer that governments can build, as in Russia; but a government is composed of men, and it builds great works only when the men who compose it dream great dreams and are driven by a great ambition to win and hold the power necessary to great achievement.

Call them kings, Communists or capitalists, they are driven by the love of success—by the passion to achieve—by the fundamentally selfish ambition to win power and renown, to excel their fellows, and to prove the metal that is in them.

Such men provided America's railroads, the telegraph and telephone systems, the radio, gasoline, automobiles, good highways.

They made this a great Nation, but they did it while striving for personal gain. Without hope of reward, there would be no builders. Men talk about unselfish service for the common good, but those who do the talking show no capacity for great achievement. The ability to do great works is given only to those who hunger for great rewards.

No Borah Hat in the Ring.

Boston Transcript.

Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, or some of his friends, has caused it to be known that a group of well-heeled backers would provide the money to support him for the Republican presidential nomination, should he indicate a willingness to run in the convention against President Hoover. The senator's response, in the form of the third person, would seem to indicate that expediency rather than ambition will govern him in considering the alleged persuasions of this anonymous group. That the Idaho senator has the presidential bug will hardly be denied, but he is reported as having remarked, rather deprecatingly, that President Hoover will be renominated, with the aid of the Southern Federal officeholders and the Eastern interests, consequently a foray of his own would be ill-advised.

Senator Borah undoubtedly is correct in his assumption that Mr. Hoover will be given the chance to run again, and he would be equally accurate in believing that the same interests that would renominate the President would be totally opposed to Mr. Borah, who has dimmed his own star among all but the so-called Progressives of the West by his impudent intrusion of his own opinions when the premier of France and the President of the United States were engaged in the most delicate of conversations.

A Democratic House.

Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Democrats have captured the House of Representatives, and it probably is an unwelcome honor. The new Congress faces the cheerless task of raising taxes or else shutting off the stream of favors that are appropriated to make friends for representatives and political parties. Republican leaders have admitted frankly they were not eager to organize the House, and now they can not.

The Democratic victories of Tuesday which bring this result point to increasing wet sentiment and dissatisfaction with the tariff. These are the danger signals for the G. O. P. in the 1932 campaign, and the issues most promising for their opponents.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Public Not Interested in the Personal Differences Between Mr. Hoover and Navy League—Is the Navy Sufficiently Strong for Adequate Defense?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Apropos your editorial, "The Navy League's Blunder," there will be no dissent from your statement that the President should be exempt from insulting references. Such an act, however, brings its own punishment by prompt public disapproval and condemnation.

However, that is not the issue in this controversy. Beyond a feeling of resentment at the uncalled-for remarks about the President's ignorance of naval matters, the public is not at all interested in the personal differences between Mr. Hoover and the league, but it is deeply concerned about the issues it has raised regarding the Navy; namely, whether or not the Navy is being starved and is inadequate to a proper defense of the nation.

This question can not be determined to the satisfaction of the public by a hand-picked, partisan and ex parte board. Its finding against the charges of the league and in support of the President are a foregone conclusion.

This matter is of such interest to the public, and concerns so vitally the safety and the welfare of the nation, that nothing short of a thorough congressional investigation of the whole subject will satisfy the public and allay its fears; and in view of world affairs, especially the situation in the Orient, the whole matter should be exhaustively investigated by the Congress immediately upon its assembling next month.

STRONG NAVY ADVOCATE.

Tuesday's Election Is a Case of History Repeating Itself—If Prosperity Is Here to Stay Mr. Hoover Will Be Reelected.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The election of last Tuesday simply is history repeating itself. The Democrats usually capture most of the offices between Presidential campaigns, only to be defeated decisively in a Presidential election. The same thing will happen again, as usual, in 1932.

Evidently the Democrats were greatly disappointed in the defeat of their candidate in Mr. Longworth's district in the important State of Ohio, more especially because Mr. Hoover strongly urged the election of the Republican candidate, Mr. Hollister.

Moreover, we don't think the result of the election from a Democratic standpoint is any indication of what the answer will be in 1932. On the contrary, we here and now make the prediction that if the prosperity (which Mr. Hearst says is here for sure now) continues up until the next presidential election, Mr. Hoover will be reelected, and by a bigger majority than he received in 1928.

Mr. Ford Presents a Very Optimistic Outlook for the Wets in 1933—Time Will Tell!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Coming events cast their shadows; it shows that in 1933 both the President and Congress will be wet. Then Congress will repeal all national prohibition laws. There will not be any new prohibition laws enacted. This will mean the annulment of the eighteenth amendment, for there will be no penalty for its violation. Then it will be up to the States to make their own prohibition laws.

The death of Senator Morrow has changed the horoscope of both political parties. Al. Smith will announce very soon his candidacy for the Presidency. He has been uncertain whether Senator Morrow would not be the Republican nominee for President in 1932. This uncertainty has been eliminated; hence his announcement. The last "powwow" that Tammany had means the launching of his candidacy, as all of the "braves" in Tammany Hall are grooming the "Happy Warrior" for President. Since John J. Raskob knows this he has donated $100,000 to boom the Smith candidacy.

If Congress would repeal section 25, title 11, of the national prohibition laws, which permit home brew, and then if the antiprohibition party would see that the amended law was strictly enforced in the South, the arid atmosphere which seems to exist in the South would disappear like the proverbial snow-ball in the melting pot. The emblem of the Democratic party in 1932 will not be a hybrid donkey as it was in 1928, the head being wet and the tail dry.

Suggests That Meal Tickets Be Given to Street Beggars Instead of Money.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some street beggars are not in the terrible plight they pretend to be in, yet some of them really are in dire need. I believe in helping the fellow who is hard pressed. I think it would be a very good idea if the restaurants would issue meal tickets to the public, ranging in price from 25 to 50 cents. Upon visiting one of these restaurants the average person could easily afford to purchase one of these meal tickets. Then when a man of decent appearance applied for help you could give him the meal ticket and thus make sure that he would not spend your cash for something other than food. Such a plan would help to relieve the unemployment problem.

Expedition Brings Freak Fish to U. S.

Acrobatic, Cave-Man and Walking Specimens Found by Parsons.

New York, Nov. 8 (U.P.).—A fish which delights in standing on its head, another known as the "cave-man" fish because of its stormy home life, and a walking fish are among the specimens brought back to the United States today by Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Parson, from Trinidad and St. Lucia.

The acrobatic fish is called the csacadou, is long and thin, has an armored body, whiskers that give it a goat-like resemblance and is extremely playful and acrobatic. Its favorite acrobatic stunt, Parson said, is to stand on its head.

The "cave-men" fish are a specie of guppy, from 1 to 3 inches long. The male seizes its mate by force, carries her to his small cave and sets her up as his wife. Later, with the same nonchalance, he deserts her and her children and never comes back.

Afghanistan Crown Prince Weds.

Kabul, Afghanistan, Nov. 8 (A.P.). Prince Mohamed Zahir Khan, 17-year-old heir apparent to the Afghanistan throne, was married today with elaborate festivities to his cousin, a daughter of Sardar Ahmedshah Khan, who is the uncle of former King Amanullah.

Radio in Polar Zone to Help Weatherman in Predictions

(Associated Press.)

The weather man may do a better job of predicting than usual in 1932-33, for he will have advance information on what kind of weather is moving down from the North Pole.

Daily reports by radio from the northernmost known land on the globe, 600 miles from the pole itself, will be sent by the Williams-Maris Arctic expedition, which sails for the Far North next June.

The weather reports will be the first ever sent daily from a station so near either pole, said Dr. H. B. Maris, of the U. S. Naval Research Laboratory, scientific director of the expedition. The leader will be Capt. F. H. Williams, U. S. Naval Reserve. Two years will be spent in the Arctic.

Besides these reports the expedition will study air movements that affect weather in the United States, measure "earth currents" that flow through the sea around Greenland and test the temperature of the high ozone layer that is believed to influence radio transmission.

The expedition's radio station and base will be at old Fort Conger, lonely outpost on bleak Ellesmere Island, where 50 years ago 18 of the 25 men of Greely's expedition starved to death because they could not communicate with civilization.

Fort Conger will be reoccupied by the expedition for the international polar year of 1932-33, during which scientists of all nations will occupy 50 stations in the Arctic and Antarctic for an intensive, simultaneous study of unexplained happenings there that affect life in the temperate zones.

One of the mysteries is how changes of temperature in the upper atmosphere affect radio. Another is the effect of terrific winds that are believed to be blowing from 200 to 300 miles an hour 30 miles above the earth.

Data on the "earth currents" in Greenland waters may help explain "magnetic storms" that disrupt radio, telegraph and long-distance telephone communication.

Two magnetic instruments will be set up, one on the Greenland shore, the other across Robeson Channel on Ellesmere Island. The salt water and earth will serve as a sort of transformer, enabling the instruments to record the currents in the channel. From these records the expedition's scientists hope to learn the nature of the currents and how their changes are related to magnetic storms.

The expedition's ship will remain at Fort Conger through the winters, and there will be two airplanes as well as the radio for added safety.

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

THE confidential radio-telephone talks of Secretary Stimson to diplomats overseas, with ten of his assistants listening in, remind one of the old-fashioned party-line telephones with every one in the neighborhood on the wire.

Since they intend to broadcast the whistle and the noise attending the firing up of "Old John Bull," the ancient locomotive at the Smithsonian Institution, next Thursday, this may prove the safest way to attend the performance. That is, if by any chance the derned thing blows up, as did the historic old locomotive ascending Mount Washington several years ago.

SOUSA will lead the Goodyear broadcast tomorrow night. As if that were not enough, there will be an additional dance band and a quartet. What would our granddads have said to that!

On Saturday nights Arthur Pryor, who can cram more music into a shorter space of time than any other director on the air, does the honors on the Goodyear program. We haven't heard Sousa in this series yet, but Pryor surely did the thing up brown Saturday night.

Also on this program was an unusual announcer. Not one who high-hatted you, or one who spoke with machine-gun rapidity, but one who talks in an easy, friendly, natural sort of a way. When he introduced Pryor he asked the famous trombonist, "How many trombone solos do you suppose you have played?"

Pryor, who sounded at the Sousa birthday party as if he had suffered a bad case of microphone fright, but apparently was much surer of himself in the Saturday broadcast, replied: "I should say about 10,000."

Announcers who are secretly training for the American Academy prize medal would do well to listen to this anonymous Goodyear announcer for pointers.

REMINISCENT of the days before commercial programs crowded the service bands off of the desirable night-time periods will be an hour's concert tonight by the Navy Band, which if current reports are true, itself had a narrow escape from being eternally banned from the broadcasting spectrum.

Lieut. Benter will direct the band and it will be heard over station WJSV beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

Frederic William Wile, during his weekly talk Saturday night remarked that it's still "a long way from Tipperary," despite the lead the Democrats and "Wets" have apparently gained in the House of Representatives through the recent elections to fill vacancies caused by death. Out of about 420 members of this House, the radio speaker said only 170 favor the wet platform, including the new members to be seated when Congress convenes.

THE probability that radio listeners will hear radio broadcasts direct from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House this season advanced a step further when it was disclosed that negotiations were progressing between the National Broadcasting Co. and the Metropolitan Opera Company.

Pomp and pageantry of the inaugural banquet to the Lord Mayor of London will be described, and the speeches, including one by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, will be heard during a rebroadcast in this country of the English ceremony, if weather conditions permit (WRC, at 4 this afternoon).

After a vacation of six months, the American School of the Air will open the 1931-32 season at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon through WMAL.

THE theme song used in the Wilkins quarter hour, "Just Wonderful," written by Harold Veo, has been published. Marguerite Cromwell sings it three times weekly, opening and closing the broadcast.

Mrs. Cromwell, who has built up a large following in the past few months, is a radio veteran. She sang over WRC more than four years ago, for a short time. She then went out to Manila, where she served as director of Station KZRM, owned by the R. C. A., the most powerful station in the Far East. There she made up programs, directed them, substituted as an announcer, and sang several times a week on the air.

Upon her return home, Mrs. Cromwell got in touch with Station WRC and was signed almost immediately for the program on which she is now featured.

Radio Commissioner Lafount walked into the commission offices at 7:28 a. m. Saturday, which is his regular time for arrival.

WHEN Adele Vasa recently sang "Bianca" it was the first time that this work of the American composer, Charles Wakefield Cadman, had been presented on the air. By coincidence, Cadman, at his home in California, 3,000 miles from the studios in New York, happened to tune in on Miss Vasa's song through a local station. The composer was so pleased with its inaugural radio rendition that he immediately wrote the singer a letter of thanks.

Peggy Clarke, who has been absent from the air for several weeks, will return to the microphone from Station WJSV at 10 o'clock this morning. In addition to the daily household talk, Miss Clarke will be assistant program director.

DEDICATING the program to the Red Cross roll call, Radio Joe will have Walter Davidson, of the American Red Cross, as guest speaker in his program tomorrow night * * * Bert Hanauer, of WRC, is an accomplished pianist * * * Little Jack Little will be guest artist with Guy Lombardo tonight * * * Bob Taplinger will induce Ben Alley to tell about his career tomorrow afternoon, WMAL * * * The true story of one of the most famous bandits of early Western days is to be told by the Old Ranger as the Death Valley Days episode tonight, WJZ, 8:30 * * * "Judge Whipple's Burglar" and the sudden need for a jail will hold attention during Real Folks, WJZ, 10:30 p. m.

If Jay G. Hayden, Washington correspondent of the Detroit News, wants to hear how he would sound talking over the radio, let him listen to Ollin Downes, music critic of the New York Times, who broadcasts the program notes of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra Sunday afternoons.

DESPITE the fact that Mrs. Hoover is said not to have been pleased with her voice as recorded by the news reels she has, in the opinion of this writer, nothing to fear from the microphone. Her voice in the 4-H Club program Saturday was pleasing and very natural.

Press Club Plans Dance.

A country store and old-fashioned barn dance will be held at the National Press Club on the night of November 21, beginning at 10 o'clock, when a fiddler will start the merriment going. Prize tickets will be distributed before the store opens.

Jane Corbett INTERPRETS the MODE

The tiny buttons play an important part on this wearable afternoon frock of black "bilitis." (Courtesy of Jean Patou, Paris.)

New York, Nov. 8.

JUST because fashion has decreed that children's styles shall be smart but not quaint, doesn't mean that we may stuff our young daughters and sisters into anything that comes along and fits! No indeed—and even if Miss Six to Sixteen would permit this, our own good taste would protest. After all, though these ladies are very young indeed, the way we clothe them is as much an indication of our style sense as the way we clothe ourselves.

And just because we read that woolen fabrics are the most popular this season for children's clothes, it doesn't mean dark, somber woolens, or a slapdash method of making. In fact, I was looking at some collections of children's clothes from famous French houses the other day, and I was struck with the delightful colors and attention to detail that every little frock ensemble or coat showed.

For instance, I saw a frock, jacket and hat set for a 14-year-old girl that might cause her mamma some moments of envy. Wool crepe, plaided in pink and white on a slate blue ground was used for the little pleated frock, which had white knife-pleated crepe de chine collar and cuffs. The sleeveless jacket was in heavy slate blue and white basket weave, as was the little tricorne hat, which was trimmed with triangles of white and pink felt. Another little ensemble consisted of a yellow broadcloth jumper frock and yellow broadcloth coat, trimmed with cocoa brown beaver. An adorable school frock was made of pink and white boucle, with intricate hand fagoting.

'N' for parties, when wool is forgotten, there were dotted sheer crepes, with pastel velvet ribbon sashes and ruchings.

The smart Parisienne has a very definite place in her wardrobe for a dress that is thoroughly wearable—and her American sister follows her in this as in all matters. Small items of chic that don't detract from this wearability at all, and do give great distinction are the reason for the success of the frock from Jean Patou which I illustrate today. It's of black "bilitis"—a brand-new fabric of silk with a rough, gleaming surface, and the little buttons on the cuff, collar and vestee tabs are a very new note of decoration.

* * * *

Let discretion in decoration be your keynote, too, in your early afternoon attire, and take advantage of the secret of the smart Parisienne!

* * * *

And I sketch two ways to be chic and unusual in your choice of hats—if they look like an old-time "boater" or a shallow soup plate, the chances are they're very smart!

* * * *

Depression times? Tommyrot! I guarantee that I can double your salary in six months. Because I've discovered the difference between the average office worker and the girl who gets there in spite of everything. Or rather, she gets there because she's constantly mindful of little details of smartness and beauty that other girls overlook. And these secrets are told plainly and fully in my leaflet this week. So, for the sake of hard cash, you'd better squander a 2-cent stamp now, don't you think, and rush your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare department of The Washington Post.

Au revoir.

Culbertson on Contract

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

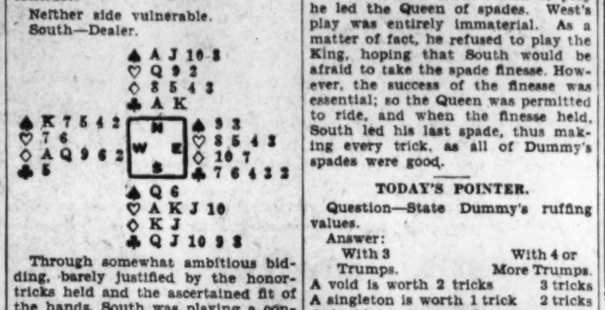
UNBLOCKING A SUIT.

GETTING rid of blocking cards is frequently a troublesome question both for Declarer and for adversaries. With the Declarer the problem occurs when he has cards of equal rank in both hands, but is short of entries in one hand or the other. With opponents of the Declarer the issue becomes acute when they find they have an established suit but, either through the peculiarities of distribution or through carelessness, the player with the least number is unable to permit his partner to run the suit.

Today's hand is an example of unblocking by the Declarer to avoid a later disadvantageous lead at a Slam contract.

Neither side vulnerable.
South—Dealer.



Through somewhat ambitious bidding, barely justified by the honor-tricks held and the ascertained fit of the hands, South was playing a contract of six hearts. West had overcalled South's Opening bid of a club with one diamond, but there had been no further adverse bidding. As North had bid spades, West counted on the possibility of 2 tricks in diamonds to defeat the contract and therefore opened his Singleton club, not so much with the hope of securing a ruff as of gracefully surrendering the lead, which he found an undesirable burden.

The first round of clubs was won in the Dummy, and South then proceeded to lead trumps, but he found that the adverse hearts were divided 4-2. It was necessary to lead all his trumps in order to pick up East's four rags. South then realized that the remaining club honor in the Dummy was a menace. His clubs were of equal trick-taking power, but while the commanding club was in the Dummy they could not be run. On the fourth round of hearts, therefore, South discarded Dummy's remaining club and then led four more rounds of clubs. West had been compelled to discard twice on the trumps. He now was forced to find four other discards. He selected for discards three diamonds and three spades, while South discarded all the diamonds in the Dummy, retaining the four spades intact. East had followed suit to the first nine rounds and on South's tenth round of play he led the Queen of spades. West's play was entirely immaterial. As a matter of fact, he refused to play the King, hoping that South would be afraid to take the spade finesse. However, the success of the finesse was essential; so the Queen was permitted to ride, and when the finesse held, South led his last spade, thus making every trick, as all of Dummy's spades were good.

TODAY'S POINTER.

Question—State Dummy's ruffing values.

Answer:

	With 3 Trumps.	With 4 or More Trumps.
A void is worth	2 tricks	3 tricks
A singleton is worth	1 trick	2 tricks
A doubleton is worth	½ trick	1 trick

Note—Having two short suits, count only the shorter, as trumps may be led.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

REGARDING GLADIOLUS.

NOW that the gladiolus season is over and the bulbs in storage, I feel it is a good time to study the events of last season. As all who grow gladiolus commercially or for exhibition purposes know, the gladioli this year were a failure. Of course, all were not failures, but as a rule growers who exhibited 3,000 flowers had, when the time came, perhaps 1,000 or perhaps only 500 which were fit to enter in any show.

The following is an extract from a letter which reached my desk from the secretary of the Detroit Gladiolus Society, Mr. Adam Steinhaurer. This letter carries out the same suggestion which I have received from other authorities and I feel its contents should prove helpful to amateurs as well as any who grow gladioli for flower show purposes.

"The drought of last year, together with the great deficiencies in precipitation of the last winter—opened another extremely dry season with plenty of heat waves of unusual duration and intensity. Thus many of the smaller streams dried up and many of our lakes and rivers dropped to alarmingly low water levels. Because of these universal conditions, our gladioli suffered considerably.

"Thrips for the first time caused devastating effects on many late blooms, so that in most localities they failed to open and wherever they did their hues and tints were beyond recognition.

"Where gladioli grew away from other flowers, the work of the thrips seemed to be ineffective, but not at all so where they grew in close proximity to hollyhocks, delphiniums and other perennials that are prone to attacks of borers.

"In storage I use gum camphor and my corms were and are very clean, but this year, because of the thrips, I will paint the outside of the boxes containing corms with citronella."

I think it would pay every one with even a dozen corms to follow the advice of Mr. Steinhaurer and paint storage boxes with citronella. It would be even better to paint them on the inside as well as on the outside.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

The Maiden's Prayer.

DEAR Frances McDonald:

After reading Mephistopheles' letter I couldn't help but think what a funny place this world is.

There is Mephisto dying to meet a "young lady who is a young lady," as he says, and finding it a most impossible thing to do, while here am I, with all the virtues that Mephisto claims to want in his ideal (good looking but not beautiful) and looking for a fellow who is all that Mephisto claims he is.

It is rather ironic that there are good boys and there are good girls * * * but they always seem to be miles apart. Why couldn't a boy like Mephisto and a girl like myself have met, admired and loved each other? Are we supposed to sit calmly by and let fate arrange matters in her own due time? Why, Oh why, do we always seem to attract to ourselves the very type that we most despise?

BEWILDERED.

Dear Frances McDonald:

A reader of your column and a stanch admirer of your good sound advice and comments on the many letters written you, I hope to see in print your idea of a letter written by a young man who signs himself "Mephistopheles," but was disappointed.

I have just finished perusing his letter for the fifth time to make sure I read aright. It seems to me that he has judged all girls a little too harshly. They are not all alike. He is a young man disgusted with girls in general. Well, I am a young, not disgusted, but a little bewildered. A young man asking for higher ideals than "cigarette smoking and ginguzzling?" I should love to meet him, to make sure there was really such a person alive! I wonder if, when he does meet the girl who shares his ideals, he will appreciate her. There are so many of them—and far from being "homely as alley cats." They, too, have ideals, but too often have wasted them on fellows whose only goal in life is to secure enough money to make "a start"—and then proceed to think up excuses to rid themselves of the "nuisance" of a steady girl. The one girl who was willing to walk with them when they had no money, willing to enjoy an occasional show, willing to forego pleasures in order to help—and what do they receive in return—they are politely "let down." What difference does it make to them how much they hurt the girl, the girl who has given them a fair "break," they've been tied down long enough, they have their start and they're off. They haven't time to think of the girl who has been decent. They want the other type now, the type who does not know the meaning of "ideal."

Maybe I am cynical, but this has proven true in a good many cases and in my own, but some day I hope I will have the good fortune to meet a fellow who has the same idea of a girl as Mephistopheles. Incidentally, I am not a proud but a modern young girl with "ideals" and hoping some day to experience a little of life's happiness instead of all its disappointments.

I WONDER.

What Today Means to You

"SCORPIO."

IF November 9 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m., from 4:50 p. m. to 6 p. m., and from 10:30 p. m. to midnight. The danger periods are from 2 p. m. to 3:45 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 9 p. m

Astrology influences on November 9 will not conduce to normal conditions, and both the unusual and the unexpected will happen. Responsibilities will be thrust upon your shoulders, which will eventually prove to be of personal benefit, as well as a burden. The stars are propitious for social events.

The child born on this November 9 will be studious, industrious, serious-minded and of a retiring nature. It will fill a good position in the world through the merit of its own efforts and the integrity of its character. It will never be socially inclined, but will be a home lover.

November 9 people will be born with a pronounced streak of optimism in their nature, and their prognostications are generally full of hope. You believe in living dangerously, from the standpoint of those who adhere to the "safety-first" creed. You are not foolhardy, nor heedlessly rash, but you are always ready to take the possibilities of tomorrow against the fulfilment of today. You have plenty of initiative, and you are never afraid to take the lead, or to rely upon your own judgment.

Your will power is of such strength as to cut through moral or material opposition, and in the teeth of contending forces to win through to your objective. Your brain is hospitable to new ideas, and you do not cling to outworn prejudices and reasonless predispositions. You pride yourself on being a "modern" man or woman, although you will always maintain the "old-fashioned" ideas about marriage, the home and family, and the fundamental decency of man and woman. You never try to force your beliefs on to others—your liberties end where your neighbors' begin.

One of your blessings is the ability to laugh—many times when tears are near the surface and have to be forced back. It is within you to love the beauties of nature, and to be inspired by art, music and literature.

Successful people born on November 9:

Jules Bache, banker.
King Edward VII.
Marie Dressler, actress.
James A. Reed, United States senator.
Stanford White, architect.
Frederick Funston, soldier.

The Arlington County Better Government League, according to an announcement yesterday by its president, Robert N. Anderson, is making plans for the final meeting during the week of November 15, in the form of a dinner at Windsor Arms.

In announcing the proposed dissolution of the organization the following statement was issued:

"The Better Government League of Arlington County sprang from a sincere desire on the part of a large group of citizens of the county to see the new form of county government succeed and had for its specific object the indorsement, support and concentration of its vote on the five of those candidates for the new county board that it considered best qualified for the office, considering geographical location and other factors.

"Having accomplished its object, and in keeping with its announced intention, the league will hold its final meeting at which time it will receive the reports of its officers and committees and thereupon dissolve.

"If it has been helpful in accomplishing something constructive for the county the league feels fully repaid for the time and effort expended."

ALEXANDRIA LEGION TO AID HIGH SCHOOL

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Alexandria Post, No. 24, American Legion, is planning an Armistice Day celebration in conjunction with the Alexandria High School. Col. Clarence Deems, U. S. A., professor of military science and tactics, and Henry T. Moncure, principal, assisting.

The cadet corps will be reviewed at 2 o'clock on the high school grounds by the heads of the various patriotic organizations in the city. After the review, the gathering will assemble on the terrace in the west of the school building.

Introductory remarks by Principal Moncure and others who will speak are R. C. Bowton, Col. Deems, Sergt. Marc C. Freeman.

The American Legion Post will also participate in the George Mason High School observance.

Love Watterson, colored, about 40 years, died in the Alexandria Hospital yesterday morning, from injuries received Saturday night. Harold Nixon, giving the Athens Hotel, Fredericksburg, Va., as his address, was driving north in Patrick street. When in the 400 block his car struck a wagon driven by Johnny Jones, colored, of 728 Jefferson street. The Watterson woman was standing near the wagon, and was struck.

The woman was carried to the Alexandria Hospital, where it was found she had internal injuries and a fractured skull. Nixon is being held by the Alexandria police for a hearing this morning.

The Alexandria Hospital had a number of minor accident cases yesterday. John Moore, a child, was treated for a broken right leg; George Boteler, 5 years old, broken arm; Dan Treger, possible skull fracture, when the automobile he was driving struck a telephone pole, and Mrs. Lillie Allen, of 728 North Washington street, broke her arm in a fall at her home.

Crash With Parked Car Causes Arrest of Driver

James Bettis, 35, of Kensington, Md., was arrested yesterday afternoon on charge of operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicants when his car struck a parked auto beside the Silver Spring substation of the Montgomery County police.

Policeman Laurence Howes took Bettis into custody. He received lacerations of the face as did his companion, McWelch Jones, 23, 919 Fourth street northeast. The parked vehicle was owned by Russell Howas, of Silver Spring. Justice of the Peace Daniel Mears held Bettis for $500 bond.

Antique Manor House Is Damaged by Blaze

Two rooms in one wing of the antique Williams Manor House at East Woodford, Va., were destroyed by fire yesterday. Volunteer firemen from Falls Church, McLean and Vienna confined the blaze to the wing and saved the main portion of the structure, which is now a summer hotel.

Apparently the flames were caused by a defective flue. The Manor House was built in Civil War times and was modernized recently. The property has been in the possession of the Williams family more than two centuries.

Alexandria Fete Group to Meet.

Meeting of the George Washington Birthday Association will be held at 8 o'clock tonight in the chamber of commerce rooms in Alexandria to formulate plans for the celebration in that town February 22, which will be presided over by former Mayor William Albert Smoot. The association plans to make the 1932 celebration the most elaborate ever staged in the city.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

SOMEWHERE on the lots of Hollywood there is a press agent—or it may be a whole publicity department, I wouldn't know about that—with more imagination than regard for fact.

From time to time, he—or it—has sprinkled the dramatic desks of the country with exciting brochures, tracts, vignettes and other forms of gratuitous handouts, setting forth that "The Public Enemy," the young hoodlum known as Jack, in "Smart Money," and even Bert, the bellhop, in "Blonde Crazy," all very tough eggs, were intrusted to the same young actor because he was a red-headed and belligerent product of New York's shadier precincts, inured by environment and lifelong habit to the ways of such murderous muggs as the films had called upon him to depict.

JAMES CAGNEY.

I find myself now in a position to state with something akin to first-hand knowledge that everything of this nature that has been disseminated is true, except the parts about his being red-headed, belligerent and inured by environment and lifelong habit to the ways of such muggs as the films have called upon him to depict!

As was intimated in yesterday's review of the current bill at the Earle, when James Cagney walked out on the stage for his first Washington apeparance in the flesh, Saturday afternoon, this typewriter immediately began to suspect that all was not well with the sources of some of its supposedly reliable information concerning stars and the circumstances surrounding their public and private lives.

After a pleasant hour, late yesterday afternoon, spent in his dressing room chatting with Mr. Cagney—whom one feels instinctively like calling Jimmy—Mrs. Cagney, and friends down for the day from New York, when they all probably would greatly have preferred tearing into a fast bout with a bit of supper between shows, I came away with the unalterable conviction that Jimmy has a swell libel suit against the aforesaid party or parties, unknown to this jury, if he cares to press it!

FOR this young Cagney fellow—he is only now in his early late twenties, if you know what I mean—offstage and offscreen is no more like the characters he plays before the cameras than George Arliss is like Bull Montana!

Blonde, yes, but not so pigmented that he could ever by any chance be dubbed "Red"; about five-feet-eight, I should say, and stockily put together, but in no faintest attribute suggestive of the underworld "gorilla"—except that, along with Victor McLaglen, he is the only player I know who can make a sock on the jaw look like the real thing in celluloid—eyes a shade or two darker than you would expect in one of his otherwise lighter coloring; a finely shaped head, with plenty of brain capacity indicated by a high forehead and ample distance from eye to ear, and a soft, well-modulated voice that at times does not even surmount the usual interferences of casual dressing-room conversation.

Such is the real James Cagney: A poised, self-contained and literate young man with a canny perception of what it is all about and no inflation whatever of the ego. Just as was remarked in this space about Estelle Taylor recently, there is, however, a glint in those darker eyes that gives warning of a tough few minutes for the opposition, if the occasion should arise!

Incidentally, a number of the screen players who have served as subjects of these Monday morning intimacies are among Mr. Cagney's friends, but of more interest at the moment, I take it, are his impressions of such of his associates as have not as yet reached Washington—Joan Blondell, for instance, who plays opposite him in "Blonde Crazy."

"Joan," says Mr. Cagney, "is perhaps easiest of all the leading women with whom I have played to make scenes click. You seemed surprised that in this picture she isn't as much the comedienne as she has been. It might interest you to know that on the stage Miss Blondell has proved herself a surprisingly competent 'heavy.' She is as effective a menace as I know, and the studio is beginning to find out that it would be an injustice to her to make her exclusively a clown—especially as fresh and as malleable as her talents is just now under expert direction.

"Loretta Young is another young actress who is as delightful to work with as she must appear to audiences out front viewing her on the screen. All of the youngsters on the lots are not so facile as these two, by a long shot, though. Some of them, no less able, perhaps, still do themselves an injustice by trying too hard. They make it apparent that they are going to act or bust—and the camera catches that just the same as it does their physical activities.

"It's a funny thing about that camera, grinding there on those scenes; it photographs what you think almost as minutely as it does what you do. That's the reason that although I began on the stage and have only been in pictures a scant two years—a year and ten months, to be exact—I don't miss the audience out front as much as some others pretend to. When I get command of my part and am thinking in terms of the character I'm playing, I am my own audience. I mean, there comes a consciousness that the thing is pleasing me, that it's going well and everything is going to be all right. Until I attain that mental state, I know that everything is going to be all wrong long before anyone else could tell me. It is something that comes with a little experience, like knowing when your voice is filling a theater from the stage."

Questioned concerning the difficulty of letter-perfect performance, without the aids of ad-libbing, sotto voce prompting and other tricks possible on the stage, Mr. Cagney was equally cogent.

"It is much easier," he said, "when the play is shot in its actual continuity. There are still directors however, who prefer, on occasion, to photograph and record scenes without regard to their natural sequence. Under such circumstances, the lines are learned and the business rehearsed right there on the set, and, don't get any foolish notion that we get them right the first time! But after anywhere from two to a dozen retakes the scene does finally come right and that once is all that is necessary."

The more I hear about it, the more I am inclined to believe that the making of talking pictures is not the joyride so many think!

JIMMY CAGNEY came East from the Coast for three weeks of personal appearances, of which this is the second. That original plan just now stands in a fair way to be considerably revised. His time in the East has been extended until December 7, and more bookings in and around New York in all probability will be taken on—which does not annoy Mr. Cagney, since New York is his home town.

Of the pictures in which he has been seen to date, his favorite is "The Public Enemy"—not because of its subject matter, but because it afforded him the widest scope, the greatest play for his interpretative powers and the freest rein in character building of any assignment he has had.

Next to that comes "Taxi," with Loretta Young, probably the vehicle in which he will next be seen in Washington. It may even come ahead of that.

"'Taxi,'" he explains, "started out to be just a nice little picture, with nothing extraordinary to suggest that it might turn out to be a 'special.' As it progressed, bits were added here and there, scenes were worked up, some deletions were made and new material substituted—you know, just feeling our way to what seemed the best effects—until at length the 'rushes' began to reveal that we really had something."

That's the way it was, you may recall, with "The Miracle Man" and, much more recently, "Way Back Home." You never can tell until you see them on that screen! And even then sometimes you can't.

From this time forth, James Cagney, by official edict, is off the mugg parts. He is to be presented as a leading man, and eventually star, in comedies and romantic dramas free from the taint of the underworld.

That ought to be a lot easier for Mr. Cagney. He doesn't have to "act" to be a gentleman, and if you think he does. Hah-h-h-ney, you're just plumb lunatic, not to say crazy!

THE THEATER YESTERDAY

"BEAUTY TRAILS IN SWITZERLAND." Second of a series of five Sunday afternoon pictured travel revues by Burton Holmes. Reviewed Sunday afternoon by C. Ransom. At the National Theater.

"Beauty Trails in Switzerland," as followed by Burton Holmes, cross at many points paths familiar to his devotees, but also open up many new and surprising spectacles for the stay-at-home traveler.

Threading new ways through the maze of peaks and valleys, lakes and glaciers; revealing the glorious panoramas unfolded from sky railways and tunneled motor roads, he leads up to his climax of novelty, a complete motion picture record of the ascent of Mont Blanc by Bradford Washburn, an American youth, and his companions.

Admirably chosen and charmingly colored "stills" disclosing particular beauties of town and chalet, verdure and mountain flora, are even more numerous than usual. By way of experiment, as he says, Mr. Holmes, following the intermission, permits a long series of these delightful flashes of nature to pass over the screen without oral comment, but to the accompaniment of piano music from Beethoven and Bach.

Beginning with a cruise on the Lake of Lucerne, with motion pictures of the passing scenery, the lecturer takes us to a neighboring peak, Pilatuskulm, and views the lake and the city of Lucerne from above. Films follow, showing peasants at their ordinary work, lumbering, gathering hay or digging peat. There is a visit to the glacial source of the Rhone and a walk through glittering tunnels of ice, followed by a film journey in the upper Rhone Valley.

The second part of the lecture is devoted largely to views in detail of the ring of peaks visible from the Gornergrat, a close neighbor of the formidable Matterhorn. Telescopic views by motion picture are among the fascinating photographic successes. But Mr. Holmes' fondness for camera magic finds best expression in his film solution of the mystery of what becomes of the sea of clouds when it clears away. Flashing over the screen in half a minute is the record of ten hours of patient camera work, looking down on the cloud that veils the valley, while it rolls and writhes itself away into nothing.

Glimpses of the Engadine Valley, Lake Lugano, Liechtenstein and other Alpine regions follow, and then comes the exciting picture story of the journey up and down Mont Blanc, as thrilling an adventure as the occupant of a comfortable theater chair may often enjoy.

KIDNAPED FURRIER MISSING 48 HOURS

Police Spur Hunt and Do Not Believe Berg Wrote Ransom Letter.

St. Louis, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Police and friends of Alexander Berg, 57-year-old president of the Hill Fur Co. here and reputed millionaire, who was kidnaped Friday evening on Lindell boulevard as he was being driven home by his Negro chauffeur, still were seeking to find a trace of the abductors and their prisoner tonight, 48 hours after the abduction.

There were no further developments in the case today and in further communications to Mrs. Berg, who received a special delivery letter early Saturday morning, mailed at East St. Louis, Ill., purporting to have been written by Berg, it instructed Mrs. Berg not to worry, to get money ready to pay ransom for Berg's return, and said he expected to be back in several days.

No amount of money was specified and a report that the kidnapers had demanded $100,000 in a letter to a friend of Berg's was denied.

Chief of Police Gerk, who is directing an intensive hunt for the kidnaped man and his abductors, said police had come to the conclusion the letter to Mrs. Berg was not written by the fur dealer.

MACFARLANE'S 214 WINS NATIONAL CAPITAL OPEN

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

THIS column's weekly second-guessing spasm is devoted today to the Georgetown-Bucknell game, which Georgetown succeeded in losing Saturday by the small but conclusive score of 7 to 0. If they tell me that hindsight is better than foresight, I will agree and include insight into the bargain.

But this reporter saw no necessity for Georgetown going down to defeat by the medium of the grammar-school forward pass that Bucknell succeeded in completing in the first five minutes. Georgetown knocked down a dozen passes that were far better conceived, infinitely better executed than the pass that won the ball game for Bucknell.

The scoring pass lacked absolutely any trace of deception. Clark Hinkle, the master of ceremonies in the Bucknell back field, simply took the toss from center and flung it in a lazy arc toward the end zone. Big "Legs" Endler, Bucknell end, was standing alone in unprotected territory and it was simply a case of making the catch. It was ridiculously easy.

Georgetown was beaten by a matter of inches throughout the second half. Twice, in scoring territory, the Hilltoppers failed to make first down by the barest fraction. Once, Bordeau carried the ball to the 9-yard line on the last down and the measurement showed an actual shortage of one-fourth of an inch from first down. That was tough.

Second guessing again, it seemed that a wiser choice of plays might have rescued the game for Georgetown at that point. Bordeau gained consistently off the tackles, but on the last two attempts to make the 2 yards that would have netted first downs, he was sent through guard and center against the massed defense of the big Bucknellians with disastrous results.

It was the positively devastating defense of the big Bucknell back field rather than the line which turned back the Hilltoppers. Greatly outweighed, the Georgetown linemen outplayed the Bucknell forwards consistently, but the stalwarts behind the line smeared Georgetown's running attack once it was beyond the scrimmage line.

Georgetown was denied by a matter of inches what appeared to be a legitimate touchdown in the fourth period on a lateral pass. The Hilltoppers had pressed forward to the Bucknell 2-yard line in a brilliant advance, and on last down King called the play for a lateral pass.

King received the toss from center and threw it laterally to Shimmins, who tumbled over the goal line for an apparent touchdown, but the play was called back when officials ruled that the heave had developed into a forward pass and was caught over the line of scrimmage by Shimmins. The play would have been allowed if King had not thrown the ball from a point less than the required 5 yards behind the scrimmage line.

Another cruel intervention of luck made possible Bucknell's touchdown. A pass from Hinkle to Myers was first batted down by McManus, Georgetown center, but as luck would have it, Goodwin, Bucknell center, caught the ball before it touched the ground and the play went as a completed pass on the Georgetown 20-yard line. Goodwin was ineligible to receive the pass until it had touched the hands of McManus.

That Georgetown didn't win was due in no part to the efforts of Carolan, elongated end, who was making spectacular catches of long passes all afternoon, but was unable to get away for touchdowns.

It is Georgetown's misfortune that its best pass receiver is an end rather than a half back. If a ball carrier had been on the receiving end of some of the passes that Carolan caught, at least a couple of touchdowns would have been scored by the Hilltoppers. A natural ball carrier doubtless would have been able to evade the lone defender who brought down the lumbering Carolan so often.

Anent Clark Hinkle, the big Bucknell back, who was the outstanding player on the field, Coach Tom Mills, of Georgetown, declared after the game that Hinkle was the greatest back that ever opposed a Georgetown team in Washington. Then he reconsidered and placed him second to "Gyp" Battles, of West Virginia Wesleyan.

Dead Heat in Chase Feature at Auteuil

Auteuil, France, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Filidor, owned by J. S. Josephs, and Rebenti, owned by H. Boulange, ran a dead heat in the Prix D'Automne, the hurdle race which featured today's racing card at Auteuil. Tartemion finished third. The course was 4,100 meters (about 2½ miles) and sixteen horses started. Filidor paid 3 to 1 in the parimutuels and Rebenti 10 to 1.

Utah Wants Big Game For Charity Benefit

The University of Utah, king of the football roost of the Rocky Mountain Conference for three years, wants to play "any formidable team in the Nation" for charity after the regular season closes.

It may be that the Utes, coached by the shrewd Ike Armstrong, may find a challenger. Utah has been boomed lately for a place in the Pacific Coast Conference. A game with a Pacific Coast eleven would act as a test of the Utah team's ability in comparison, something of a try-out or initiation.

Utah's 60-to-6 defeat of the Colorado Aggies, regarded as a pretty good football team, caused some of the Ute's supporters to think that perhaps new football worlds to conquer might have to be found.

Hawks' Rally Overwhelms Irvington

Mitchell Dashes 80 Yards to Tie Score in 19-6 Win.

Intercepted Passes Aid in Wiping Out Visitors' Lead.

"Mitchell" Was Fouts; Banned by G. W. U.

Fullback Mitchell (No. 9), of the Mohawk eleven, who contributed an 80-yard touchdown run in the defeat of the Irvingtons, was identified last night as Leon Fouts, of Omaha, Nebr., third-string full back on the varsity squad of George Washington University. Fouts last night was summarily dismissed from the university squad for participating in the game.

Manager Patsy Donovan made the following statement last night:

"No player by the name of Fouts played with the Mohawks yesterday, as far as I know. The player "No. 9" represented himself to me as Jimmy Mitchell, the same man who played with the Celtics against the Mohawks and Apaches last year."

By WALTER HAIGHT.

AN apparently beaten group of Mohawk players who stumbled down the clubhouse steps at the half bewailing a break that had given the Irvington Club, of Baltimore, a 6-0 lead, stepped back on the field some fifteen minutes later to carry off an 19-6 decision and gain a commanding lead in the South Atlantic League.

Some 2,000 fans saw the miracle at Griffith Stadium.

The homer with the bases loaded which changed completely the complexion of the game was an 80-yard run to a touchdown on the opening kick-off of the third period by Jimmy Mitchell, a stranger in the Mohawk line-up.

Mitchell Almost Fumbles The Ball.

Mitchell got under the ball on his 20-yard line, half way fumbled, and then grabbed it apparently to run straight into at least five Irvington men. Out of the mass of struggling humanity Mr. Mitchell popped like a champagne cork. By this time the Mohawks had caught the spirit of the play and were dropping would-be tacklers with regularity.

Mr. Mitchell cut toward the left side of the field, straightened out as Snitz Snyder dropped the last Irvington player with a chance to make the tackle, and sprinted over the goal line amid the usual "Hawks! Hawks! Hawks!" of the Indians' one-man cheering section.

Tuck Dalglish fumbled on the attempt to convert the extra point and another tie game loomed.

But the Mohawks were soon in front never to be headed. The second touchdown came at a time when Irvington had benefited by a poor kick to get the ball in midfield. The Balti-

Bordeau, Georgetown Grid and Ring Star, To Make Pro Boxing Debut This Winter

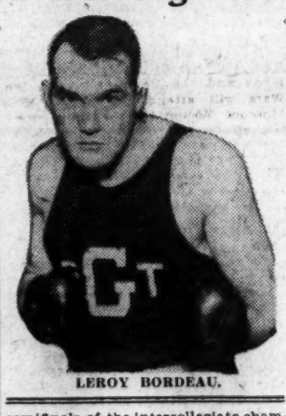
Won District A. A. U. Light Heavyweight Championship.

By JACK ESPEY.

LEROY "OX" BORDEAU, Georgetown University's football and boxing star, will enter the professional boxing game upon the close of the current football season when he will have completed his allotted three years in intercollegiate competition.

Having won the District amateur light heavyweight championship this year following titular conquests in the South Atlantic tournaments of the preceding two years, Bordeau attracted much notice from pugilistic promoters and managers, but the several offers he received last winter could not shake him from a desire to finish out his term of competition for Georgetown.

Bordeau performed with Georgetown's boxing team during the season of 1929-1930 and advanced to the semifinals of the intercollegiate championship tournament. Last year Georgetown did not sponsor a ring team and the husky "Ox" was confined to amateur circles in his attempts to pursue the sport he likes best.



LEROY BORDEAU.

Football First Love; May Join Stable in New York.

Football was first in the heart of this muscular son of the Adirondack section of New York State until his first year at Georgetown when he was given a trial on the boxing team and immediately made good. In an intramural tournament he scored three knockouts, each of which took less than a round.

Bordeau is considering a proposition to join a coterie of boxers managed by Joe Welling, an old-time lightweight, whose base of operations is New York City. Arthur Huttick, who appeared in one of last summer's features at Fort Washington, is under Welling's management.

Efforts are being made, it is reported, to sign Bordeau for a bout with Billy Schwartz, pride of nearby Alexandria, this to be Bordeau's baptismal performance as a professional.

Oliver, C. U., Will Return To Team

Bergman Gives Cards Rest; St. Francis Is Next Foe.

DISCOVERY that his ankle injury was a mere bruise instead of a fracture, the original diagnosis of a Pittsburgh physician, has renewed the football career of Johnny Oliver, star half back of Catholic University. Whereas it was thought last week that Oliver, a senior, had played his last game for C. U., the Fitchburg (Mass.) Flash now is likely to perform against St. Francis Friday night, and certainly against Providence and Loyola which follow on the Cardinal schedule.

This good news to followers of the Brookland team, that has climbed into the limelight with five straight victories, had its source in an examination of Oliver's ankle by Dr. Lawn Thompson, university medical director, last Wednesday. This occurred five days after the player had been hurt in the Catholic-Duquesne game at Pittsburgh.

Ankle Thought Broken.

X-ray pictures taken of the injury in Pittsburgh revealed no fracture. Dr. Thompson found, though the Pittsburgh physician who first saw them declared the ankle was broken and prescribed certain treatment, including the wearing of a cast for a period of four weeks. The pictures were sent here at the requst of Athletic Director Arthur Bergman.

Upon learning of the diagnostic error, Oliver, who had given up hope of playing the remainder of his last year, sought to resume his duties with the team, but owing to the rigid binding of the cast, the ankle and foot had become stiff, with the result that he could not participate in the Manhattan game last Saturday despite frequent massage and sun-lamp treatments.

Continued massaging and exposure to artificial heat is expected to restore Oliver to playing condition within the next two or three days. He will see action against St. Francis if it is necessary. His strongest forte is forward passing.

Bergman Gives Cards Rest.

Coach Bergman, pleased with the recent showing of his team, which has exceeded the wildest hopes of Brookland adherents, has canceled practice for today to give the Cardinals a well-earned rest.

Little is known of St. Francis' ability, although the Pennsylvania eleven has done nothing startling as yet. Bergman, however, intends to guard against overconfidence among his men.

Bowie "Charity Day" Booked November 30

Baltimore, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Maryland's fifth and final charity racing day was fixed today for November 30 at Bowie. The fall meet at that track is concluded Saturday, November 28, but horses and jockeys will remain over the week-end for a Monday program.

When the charity day plan was first proposed last spring it was decided that each track would devote one day's receipts to the unemployment fund. Bowie, Havre de Grace and Pimlico tracks made their contributions in the spring and Laurel had its charity day at the beginning of the fall meet last month.

Approximately $88,000 was realized which fell short of the $100,000 desired.

Cunningham Finishes 8th; Caldwell Tops Amateur Group.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

THERE is nothing new in the suggestion that Willie Macfarlane, professional at the Oak Ridge Club in Westchester County, N. Y., with his smooth-shaven, bespectacled face, looks like a doctor of divinity or at least a student of theology.

Neither is it news to say that he is one of the most consistently good golf players, for he demonstrated his skill and steadiness when he won the national open championship by defeating Bobby Jones. Therefore, it is not surprising to add that yesterday he won the National Capital open championship played on the courts of the Kenwood Club, leading the field by six strokes.

Macfarlane had three fine rounds for the 54 holes included in the competition. He followed his first round of 72 on last Saturday with a par-golf round of 70 yesterday morning and finished with another round of 72 yesterday afternoon for a total of 214. Only two players came anywhere near him—Tommy Armour, formerly of the Congressional Club and now located in Detroit, and Sal di Buono, a young Italian who is connected with the Bonnie Briar Club in Westchester County, both of whom ended with a total of 220 strokes.

Macfarland Has 4-Stroke Lead.

At the conclusion of the first round yesterday morning, MacFarlane led the field with 142, four strokes ahead of Armour and Ed Dudley, formerly of Wilmington, Del., and the sensational winner of the Western open. At the end of the first nine holes in the afternoon's final round, conditions had changed. MacFarlane, with missed putts and encounter with a trap, was out in 37, while Armour, who was out in 33, had gained the four strokes by which MacFarlane was leading. In fact, it seemed as if Armour was destined to repeat his phenomenal score of 68, made in the morning round, and which had brought him from a place far down the line at the end of the first day's play into a tie for second position, for he had scored 33 on the same nine in the morning round.

Standing on the tenth tee, Armour was all even with MacFarlane. Away out on the horizon, however, was a cloud no larger than a man's hand, and presently Armour was enveloped in its jinx-like shadow. The first ball he drove from the tenth tee went out of bounds, and with a grim smile he watched the white-cap Marine wave energetically toward the road. The next ball met nearly a similar fate, landing away in the rough below the green. The hole is par three. Armour finally rolled his ball into the cup for a five.

Armour Encounters More Trouble.

This was bad enough, but the worst was yet to come. The twelfth hole is a par 5, 488 yards, with a water hazard guarding the green. Armour's brassy second shot landed his ball in the water. Dropping back, he played 4 to the green and his ball came to rest 10 feet above the pin. Endeavoring to gobble a 5, he putted down the slippery sloping surface and was almost as far below the hole as he had been above it. He missed his 6 and finally holed out in 7. When, on the thirteenth green, he took three putts for a 6, he said good-by to the $700 which was the purse for the winner. Although he finished in a tie for second, those missed shots cost him at least $100 apiece.

In the meantime, Macfarlane was sailing steadily along, with a birdie 4 on the twelfth, where Armour had taken 7, and birdies on the fourteenth and sixteenth holes, with only one hole in a stroke over par on the fifteenth, where he took three putts from a distance of two feet, so that he finished the homeward nine in 38, one under par, while Armour was struggling to get home in 41. Macfarlane's card for his two rounds yesterday:

MORNING ROUND.
Out ..... 4 4 4 4 5 3 5 3 5—37
In ..... 3 4 4 4 4 3 3 3 4—33—70

AFTERNOON ROUND.
Out ..... 5 5 4 4 4 4 4 3 4—37
In ..... 3 4 4 5 3 5 3 5 5—35—72

Frank Cunningham, assistant at the Burning Tree, was the only Washington professional to figure in the money, and he received $90 for eighth place, with a card of 70-79-75—224. The five amateurs who won prizes were Ernest L. Caldwell, of Baltimore, who qualified for the national amateur, who tied with Joseph Lynch, of West Newton, Mass., and a member of the Lesley cup team, each with 241; Thomas F. Cole, Baltimore, 246; Everett Eynon, Columbia Club, with 248 and William R. Howell, Richmond, Va., with 249.

The real contest of the afternoon was between Eynon and Howell as to who could take the greatest number of strokes on the thirteenth hole. Eynon playing from trap to trap finally holed out in 9 but Howell, after driving into the woods, then being penalized by an unplayable lie, wasting several shots in a trap and finally holing out in three putts, went Eynon one better and scored a 10.

The management of the Kenwood Club received universal commendation for the manner in which the event was promoted and conducted. The field of entrants included no less than six former national champions and it speaks well for the longevity of golf professionals that no less than eleven contestants played at Kenwood who were in the national open at the Columbia Club 10 years ago. The crowd in the gallery yesterday, variously estimated at from 3,000 to 5,000, was handled without the least friction, the members of the club who acted as marshals being aided by a detachment of Marines who, like the members, were uniformly courteous and efficient.

WIDENER ENTRY SELECTED TO WIN TODAY'S PIMLICO FEATURE

Top-Weighted Mr. Sponge Is Choice

Is Coupled With Pari Mutuel, Which Also Has a Chance.

Sun Eclipse Picked to Cop Monktown Steeplechase.

By J. B. SNODGRASS.
Special to The Washington Post.

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, Nov. 8.—Besides exhibiting the best filly this country has produced, the Futurity at Pimlico Saturday, won by C. V. Whitney's Top Flight, was the most colorful and classic of any previous running of this crowning event of fall racing in Maryland.

Top Flight made three records in her race for $56,170. She now leads all 2-year-olds, including Domino, for money won as a 2-year-old, with a total of $219,000. This sum also puts her ahead for 1931 of winnings of horses of all ages. Twenty Grand, her closest rival, has won $218,545. She also established a higher mark for fillies and mares of history, Princess Doreen formerly holding the filly record.

Top Flight's Title Secure.

Top Flight's title of champion of 2-year-olds over colts and fillies alike is as secure as was ever a turf crown. She has met the best of the East and West and conquered all alike. Going in retirement for the year unbeaten, with seven stake victories, the filly already has become the most talked-of for the Kentucky Derby next spring, with predictions by horsemen that she will duplicate the feat of the late H. P. Whitney's Regret, by winning the classic in Kentucky, and thus become the second filly to win it.

Pimlico's meeting ends next Saturday, when Bowie follows with a meeting of two weeks, the final racing of the Eastern fall season. Winter racing opens on Thanksgiving Day at Jefferson Park, New Orleans. Miami and Havana get in action about Christmas time.

Pimlico offers several important stakes for its closing week, one of which, the Baltimore Handicap, will be decided tomorrow. This handicap, $5,000 added, is a mile and a furlong and fifteen horses have been listed to start. J. E. Widener's entry is selected to win. The entry embraces MR. SPONGE, top weight with 125 pounds, and PARI-MUTUEL. MR. SPONGE did not show to advantage in his last race, stumbling at the start. He worked a mile and a furlong Saturday in 1:56. PARI-MUTUEL has light weight, and while not supposed to rank with the older horses, may surprise. The filly TRED AVON, which set the Pimlico record for a mile and 70 yards on November 3, may be counted upon to make the race a stirring one. She has never been a mile and a furlong, but she has a chance to take the important money. DR. FREELAND is back in best form, winning at Empire City and second in the Washington Handicap at Laurel. He should be in the money.

FIRST RACE—MUELLER is selected to win. He was in the money his last three starts in Chicago among fast juveniles. Mrs Walter M. Jeffords' HORATIA has been running in strong fields in Maryland and should be the contender. She may improve. HAYFIRE might get the purse.

SECOND RACE—SUN ECLIPSE stands out in the Monktown Steeplechase, second race. He has won his last three starts easily. CREEK should improve over his last race when he ran third to SUN ECLIPSE. DARK MAGNE is next best.

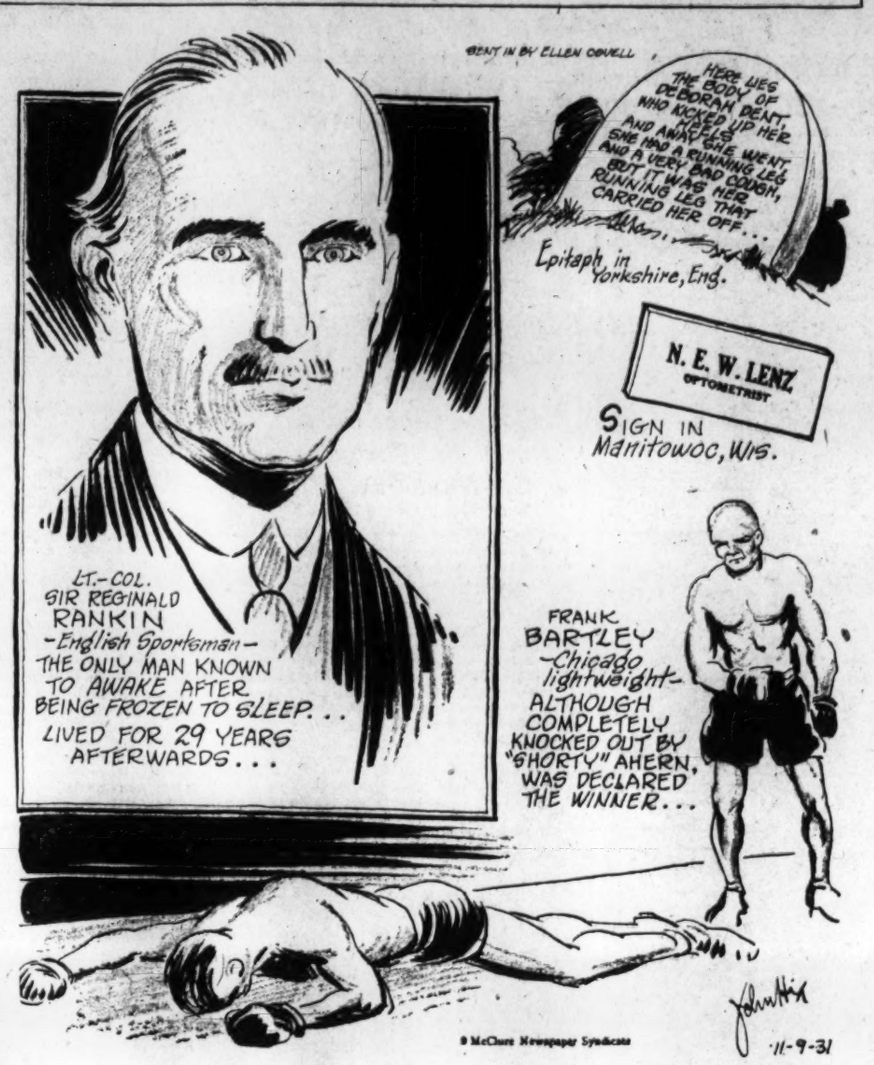
THIRD RACE—RUANE should win on general form, but MONOCLE displayed dazzling speed in his last effort and will give the older horse a run for the money. DOUBLE O, second last out, should be close.

FOURTH RACE—The Brandywine's Stables' PENCADER trounced a fast field of 2-year-olds in his last race and should win. He also defeated Blue Damsel in an earlier race. DELICACY should be the contender. ALLENFERN, which has been winning in New York, should be no further back than third.

SIXTH RACE—KHORASAN is best here. FRUMPER, beaten a nose by Storm, is dangerous and will be the favorite. IMPISH has a chance. He beat Moine in New York.

SEVENTH RACE — VACILLATE, which won her last two races easily, is selected to win from the overworked FORTUNATE YOUTH. ST. PRISCA may run in third at a long price to show. SMEAR has an outside chance. The race seems between the two first named.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix



IN 1902 Lieut. Col. Rankin climbed Mount Acendagua, the highest peak in the Western Hemisphere (23,080 feet), on the border of Argentina and Chile. On his descent he was overtaken by a blizzard at an altitude of 20,000 feet, and was frozen to sleep. When the blizzard had passed, Rankin, after terrible experiences, managed to reach safety. He recovered, but his toes had to be amputated. He died September 10, 1931, at Hereford, England.

In Chicago, in the 90's, boxing had its bad spots. At the Chicago Athletic Association a bout took place between "Shorty" Ahern and Frank Bartley. In the sixth round "Shorty" brought over a hefty wallop that laid Bartley completely cold. George Siler, the outstanding referee of those days, pointed to Bartley's prostrate figure and cried, "He wins!" It took the combined efforts of four men to keep "Shorty" from laying the referee cold alongside Bartley. Although spectators, newspapermen, and all others disputed Siler, and despite the fact that Bartley was out for a full 20 minutes, he would not change his decision, claiming that the bout was scheduled for only six rounds, and that Bartley had won five of them.

Hurt Bucknell Grid Star Leaves Hospital

His injury less serious than at first feared, George Vetter, Bucknell University substitute half back, was able to leave Georgetown University Hospital yesterday after treatment for a blow sustained on his head during the game between Bucknell and Georgetown the day previous in Griffith Stadium. It was thought at first that Vetter received concussion of the brain. He was unconscious for a period of one-half hour.

Baseball Czar Pays Visit to Capital City

Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis stopped off here yesterday and is scheduled to leave today, but he states that his visit had nothing to do with the national game.

"I had to go to New York on business," said Landis, "and decided to come by way of Washington in order to visit an old friend who is ill. I haven't a single idea regarding baseball to talk about; in fact, I'm just marking time waiting to get the football and basketball seasons out of the way, so we can start baseball again."

"CASEYS" WOULD PLAY.

A practice game with a strong unlimited team is sought by the Knights of Columbus quintet. Teams interested should call Athletic Director Charles Reynolds at Metropolitan 9619 between 7 and 10 o'clock tonight, Wednesday or Friday. The Caseys worked out yesterday on their home floor and displayed unusually good form, despite the fact that it was only their second time out.

Frater Courtmen Will Report Tonight

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 8.—Alpha Delta Omega Fraternity basket ball candidates will meet at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night at the home of Ralph Scrivener, 1012 Prince street, to make plans for the impending cage campaign. Practice will start Thursday night at Armory Hall.

The Fraters won the amateur unlimited title here last winter and expect to have virtually the same array of stars back in the fold this season. "Doc" Dreifus, former Tulane University and semipro star, is expected to coach, with Scrivener again serving as manager.

TROJANS WIN.

The Northeast Trojans added another scalp to their impressive array of victories when they downed the Congress Heights eleven by a score of 6 to 0 at Congress Heights yesterday. Rob Keller went over with the Trojan score late in the first period after the team had carried the ball on a sustained drive from midfield. It was the Heights team's first defeat in four years. Bim Misel's good work stood out for the winners.

CHARITY RING PROGRAM IS FILLED

4 Prelims Listed on Alexandria Day Nursery Card.

A QUARTET of four-round preliminaries will support the first boxing show next Monday night at Alexandria for the benefit of the Alexandria Day Nursery.

The following bouts have been listed: Marino Marini vs. Nevin Barber, Billy Eschinger vs. Sailor Oden, Soldier Smith vs. K. O. Riley, and Roddy Davis vs. Jack Cody.

Sam Weiss, who will meet Billy Schwartz in the main event of eight rounds, polished off Herman Weiner, Baltimore heavyweight last Monday night in the Monumental City after he had been knocked down for a count of 9 in the fourth round.

Spotted Weiner 17 Pounds But Won.

Weiss spotted Weiner 17 pounds and then proceeded to give Weiner a neat lacing. He took seven of the ten rounds and had Weiner on the run most of the distance.

Realizing that he will have a stiff task on his hands, Schwartz is down to hard training with road work occupying most of his attention. The Alexandria boy is anxious to defeat Weiss and establish himself as the best light-heavyweight in these parts.

Ramsay Is Nominated For U.S.G.A. Position

New York, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—H. H. Ramsay has been nominated to succeed himself as president of the United States Golf Association by its nominating committee, which made its report today to the association secretary.

The entire slate of officers inducted into office with him last January again were renominated, with Robert M. Cutting and Rodman E. Griscom as vice presidents, Prescott S. Bush, secretary; Charles H. Sabin, treasurer, and Livingston Platt, counsel.

Melvin A. Traylor, of Chicago, was nominated as chairman of the 1932 nominating committee, with Henry B. Heyburn, Roger D. Lapham, H. C. Mackall and Challen B. Parker as members of the committee.

Chicago Bears Beat Portsmouth, 9 to 6

Chicago, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—The Chicago Bears just about pushed the Portsmouth Spartans out of the race for the National Professional League title today by trimming the Ohio eleven, 9 to 6, at Wrigley Field. It was Portsmouth's second defeat of the season.

The contest was bitterly fought from start to finish and the first half ended in a scoreless tie. In the middle of the third period a great kick by Dick Nesbitt, former Drake star, traveled from the Bear 15-yard line over the Spartan goal line to give Chicago a break. Tony Holm's return kick was downed on his 39-yard line. The Bears made a first down, Luke Johnson place kicked from the 28-yard line. Just before the end of the period, Jesse Hibbs blocked Holm's punt on the fourth down and the Bears took the ball on Portsmouth's 19-yard line. Nesbitt and Molesworth took it to the 5-yard line as the period ended and Carl Brumbaugh circled the Spartans' left end for a touchdown on the first play of the final period.

Portsmouth scored a few seconds later on a double pass, Schwartz to Presnell to McKalip, which accounted for 42 yards.

Yellowjackets Bow To Giant Pros, 13-0

New York, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—The New York Giants overcame stubborn resistance from the Philadelphia Yellowjackets today and won their National Football League game by a 13-to-0 count.

Benny Friedman set the pace for the Giants. His 30-yard run in the first period paved the way for the initial score. Hap Moran carried the ball over on a 12-yard dash and kicked the extra point. Friedman made two passes good for the second score, tossing a long one to Red Cagle, then passing to Campbell for the touchdown.

PROVIDENCE WINNER.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 8 (A.P.).—A 45-yard pass from Dexter Shelley to Jack Rose, both of Texas, brought a 7-to-0 victory for the Providence National Professional Football League team over the Brooklyn Dodgers here today. Shelley kicked the point after touchdown. Providence threatened seven times to score, but a desperate defense halted their advances, twice inside the 3-yard line.

G. U.-West Virginia Meet In Saturday's Feature

GEORGETOWN'S sixth annual clash with West Virginia, the occasion for the gathering of Hilltop alumni from all sections of the country in a "homecoming" celebration, heads the Capital's college football program this week. The game is scheduled Saturday afternoon in Griffith Stadium, which on Friday night will be the scene of Catholic University's meeting with St. Francis College.

Georgetown and West Virginia first met on the gridiron in 1902, when the Hilltoppers won by a score of 5 to 0. The modern series was inaugurated in 1926 and has continued annually since, all games being scheduled in Washington.

West Virginia Won Last Year.

The 1926 encounter resulted in a West Virginia triumph by 13 to 10. The following two years saw Georgetown the victor, the score in 1927 being 25 to 0 and in 1928, 12 to 0. In 1929 a superior Georgetown eleven was held scoreless by the Mountaineers in a deadlock, and in 1930 the visitors returned to the win column with a score of 14 to 7. Thus, unless another tie is recorded, the series will develop an edge for one or the other next Saturday.

Neither West Virginia nor Georgetown has been enjoying a successful season thus far, each having lost more games than it has won. Bucknell's triumphant invasion of the stadium last Saturday gave Georgetown its fourth defeat of the year as against only two wins and one tie. The Mountaineers defeated their old rivals, West Virginia Wesleyan, last Saturday, 12 to 7, but, considering the vast difference in the quality and quantity of material each has available, the Mountaineers should have piled up a larger score.

Despite its mediocre record, West Virginia probably will be slightly favored to win the forthcoming engagement for the reason that Georgetown's forces are sadly depleted through injuries. In all the history of football at the Hilltop no team has ever been so persistently jinxed by the injury bugaboo as the 1931 edition. In the face of adversity, however, Coach Tommy Mills' men have acquitted themselves nobly and at no time has their spirit sagged.

Neale Has Improved Mountaineers.

Greasy Neale, former University of Virginia coach, is at the helm at Morgantown this season and is credited with having improved the Mountaineers over their form of 1930 when Ira Rodgers coached the team. Neale has brought out several sophomore players whom he hopes to use against Georgetown.

After Saturday there will be no rest for the Hilltoppers until the regular season closes, for on November 21 they will meet Villanova at Villanova, Pa., and on November 28 stack up against the University of Detroit in the stadium. Two weeks thereafter they will participate in the unemployment benefit exhibition with George Washington and Catholic University against Alabama's 1930 Rose Bowl champions.

The only other local team scheduled for action this week-end is Gallaudet, which journeys to Annapolis to tackle St. John's College Saturday morning.

Catholic University's clash with St. Francis was originally scheduled for Saturday, but Brookland officials, wishing to avoid conflict with the Georgetown-West Virginia game, took advantage of an opportunity to stage the contest on Friday night when there will be no counterattraction.

Georgia's "Catfish" Smith Struts for N. Y. Writers

By HENRY McLEMORE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8 (U.P.).—If Yale and New York University ever hope to defeat Georgia in football they should appoint a committee of eight substantial citizens to call upon Vernon "Catfish" Smith and inform him that the Civil War is over.

It is quite obvious that "Catfish" doesn't know that the North and South called it quits way back in '65. In his capacity as left end on the Georgia Varsity he comes North twice each fall fired with the determination to wreck, derail and subdue any and all Yankees. So far the Yankees have been unable to prevent him from completing his wicked purpose. It was Catfish who led the assault on Yale a few weeks back, and it was Catfish who, more than any one else, enabled Georgia to whip New York University in the Yankee Stadium Saturday, and thus keep in the running for the national championship.

Of course, Catfish did not singlehandedly whip New York University. He was given noble support by all his mates, especially by Buster Mott, the high-striding, shifty half back who ran back a kick-off 96 yards for Georgia's only touchdown. But it was Catfish's unerring toe that booted home the extra point that won the game, and it was Catfish who stopped Bill Abee in his tracks when Bill had but a half yard to go for a touchdown and a New York University victory.

Smith Played Whale Of a Game.

Southern football experts had told the writer before the game that Smith was really undeserving of all the high praise that had been given him, that he was actually an ordinary end, and that only his knack for making at least one spectacular play a game kept him in the limelight.

Well, maybe so, but against N. Y. U. Saturday the Catfish was a three-ply, double-dipped, hand-woven, head-over-heels holy terror. When he didn't get in a play, it was because three or more N. Y. U. players dropped all other duties and concentrated on getting him out of the way. He was spectacular, yes, but he was consistently spectacular. And when a man insists on being spectacular week in and week out, you can't call him lucky.

There was nothing lucky about that extra point he kicked. He must have known the game was riding on the ball, yet he dropped back with all the nonchalance of a Rockefeller handing a dime to a beggar, and kicked it a mile-a-minue through the middle. There was nothing lucky about his getting squarely in Abee's path. He simply scrambled his way through the mob. If the Catfish doesn't make all-America, you can write it down that something's wrong.

Georgia's other all-America candidate, Quarter Back Austie Downes, played elegant football all afternoon.

It was Downes who dropped McNamara on Georgia's 4-yard line, and it was Downes who twice halted N. Y. U. touchdown drives by intercepting passes.

Strange as it seems, it was Mott, the man who scored the winning touchdown, who was largely responsible for the inefficiency of Georgia's attack. His timing was off all afternoon and time and again the fact that he was a split second behind enabled N. Y. U. to plug gaps before the ball carrier arrived. Mott's slowness was particularly noticeable on one of Georgia's pet plays when it delayed a drive off tackle.

The game was a heart breaker for N. Y. U. to lose. The Violets outplayed Georgia for 59 minutes, only to have the Southerners turn their one minute into victory. Bill Abee, Bob McNamara and Vavra and Hugret, ends, were outstanding for the New Yorkers.

NAVY RESTS FOR IRISH BATTLE

Middie Gridmen Get Rest Until Wednesday Afternoon.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 8.—With several of the players pretty badly battered but no serious casualties, the Navy football squad returned to Annapolis from Columbus, Ohio, today, after Saturday's hard battle against Ohio State.

Though Notre Dame's powerful team is next in line, the game to be played in Baltimore Stadium on the coming Saturday, Rip Miller, head coach, announced tonight that he will not work his charges hard during the week. On the contrary, he said, he is going to give them rest, both physically and mentally. "They have been working hard this season," Miller said, "with one stiff argument after another, and they really need a rest and deserve it. Therefore, I do not expect to allow them to resume activities again until Wednesday."

Miller Compliments Buckeyes.

Statistics of the Ohio State game show that the Middies gained eleven first downs to the Buckeyes' seven, and outrushed and outpassed the enemy to gain in the aggregate 100 more yards.

Coach Miller paid compliment to the power of the Ohio State aggregation, and at the same time had no criticism to offer of the work of his pupils. "The boys," he said, "played a hard, clean game all the way, but things just did not break right for their efforts to be rewarded by a touchdown or two, whereas the Ohioans were a bit more fortunate."

Miller was highly pleased over the showing of Bert Davis, who played his first varsity game at quarter back. Whether he will continue to have the call over Denny, who has been the mainstay so far, of Becht and other prospects, is a question. Davis, who is the Naval Academy champion middleweight boxer and captain of the varsity team for the coming season, was keen to get into the game anyhow because of home State surroundings. He is from Youngstown and played on the high school team of that city as a teammate of the great Wesley Fessler, captain of the Ohio State eleven last year and all-around athlete.

That Notre Dame has a superteam performing this year is the opinion generally expressed in local football circles, especially since the crushing defeat administered to Pennsylvania Saturday, though the Quakers are reputed to be much stronger than a year ago. Johnny O'Brien, end at Notre Dame last year, now assistant to Coach Miller at Navy, saw the Ramblers in action against Carnegie Tech a week ago, and this is the report he brought back to Annapolis:

"Last year we were smoother, but this season Notre Dame is a power team—all power, more power than any team ever seen at South Bend. They don't bother much with deception or trick plays. When they feel a touchdown coming on their massive line begins opening up holes wide as the depression, and the backs gallop through. Starting almost anywhere in the field, ten to fifteen plays is all they care to devote to a touchdown."

Hence the Tars will have a rough row to hoe, even to make a creditable showing against the Ramblers. In the meantime, Navy mentors are viewing the situation with strategy, whether or not to permit their charges to get badly used up in this engagement, in view of the Southern Methodist, Pennsylvania and Army struggles that are in the offing.

HAWKS BEAT IRVINGTON, 19 TO 6

moreans tried a pass and Bill Helvestine, of the Mohawks, intercepted the ball on the run and it was only a formality for him to sprint to the goal line. Mitchell and Snyder tried to team for a placement kick for the point but the ball failed to get off the ground.

Irvington came back fighting, however, and the hectic third period had not passed before the Baltimoreans had the ball on the Hawks' 10-yard line, the principal vehicle being a 40-yard pass from Campbell to Eddie Ryscavage. The Mohawks yielded only 5 yards in three plays and a pass over the goal line ended the threat.

Fumble Gives Irvington Chance.

In the fourth period, a fumble gave the Irvingtons another scoring opportunity which ended with Daiglish intercepting a pass. It was this the same player who accounted for the Mohawks' third touchdown, with a brilliant catch of another Irvington pass. The ball hit in his hands high over his head, it bounced in the air and Daiglish made a shoestring catch while on the run to scamper the few necessary yards to score. He also dropkicked the added point.

The first period was played entirely in Mohawk territory as the result of a Mohawk kick, blocked by Parkinson and recovered by Jerry Ryscavage after which neither team could make much headway and the resultant punting by Mitchell and Campbell was about even.

Schwartzmann gave the Mohawks their first scoring opportunity soon after the second period started. He recovered a fumble on the Irvington 45-yard line. At this point, Mr. Mitchell, came through with a 25-yard run across the left side of the Irvington line. Line plays netted a first down with 8 yards to go but the Baltimoreans braced and a Mohawk pass was grounded over the goal line.

Irvington kicked out and Allen gave the Baltimore Club the ball near midfield by recovering a fumble. On the second play, Campbell tossed a pass to the left side of the field. At least two Mohawk players touched the ball but as it seemed about to drop to the ground, Eddie Ryscavage gathered it in and ran 45 yards to the touchdown which looked mountainous at the time. A pass for the point failed.

All-America Duel Fails To Materialize.

The battle of near all-Americans, Pug Parkinson, of Pitt, and George Ekaitis, Western Maryland, that had been expected, failed to materialize. Ekaitis failed to put in an appearance and the player designated as Parkinson didn't even look good in his uniform.

However, the game lacked nothing in thrills, poor and good football, and a lot of grunting from hefty line men.

Again the principal line job of the day was turned in by Nick Colisano, of the Hawks. He was hurt just before the half and was the recipitant of one of the few big "hands" given a player in a Sunday game played at Griffith Stadium this season.

Next Sunday the Apaches and Celtics resume their feud.

THE Dixie Pigs went into a tie with the Seaman Gunners for the leadership of the unlimited division of The Post's Capital City League by holding the Marian eleven to a scoreless tie at Seat Pleasant, while the Gunners were dropping a 25-to-6 verdict to the Fraters at Alexandria. The latter contest was the feature of the program. In the other games played in this division, Brookland swamped St. Stephen's, 25 to 7, and Del Ray eked out a 6-to-0 win over the Griffith-Blue Coals.

The largest crowd of the season witnessed the Gunners' downfall. The Virginians scored soon after the opening kick-off on Cabell's 65-yard run, after taking a lateral pass from Crupper. The second touchdown was scored by Casey Dennis, former George Washington University star, who intercepted a lateral pass by Roberts, Gob half back, and ran unmolested to the goal line. A sustained drive in the second period, with Cabell, Crupper and Sutton doing most of the ball-carrying, netted the third score.

Both Score in Third Quarter.

Both teams counted in the third quarter. Pierce tallied for the Gunners, treking 35 yards to the goal, after taking a 15-yard pass from Young. The Fraters also scored via the air, Bell going over after receiving a Haywood heave.

Both the Dixies and the Marions muffed a pair of golden scoring opportunities as they battled through to a scoreless periods. The Dixies "suere camped near their opponent's 5-ha rd stripe on one occasion, with four a downs to go, and were unable to get 20 per the final chalk mark. On an Argeier occasion, they tramped down to the 10-yard mark only to be halt-last a second time. The Marions in-alowsurated a drive in the third period Fort carried them to their rivals' uatioard line, but the effort was wast-ready when they fumbled and the Dixies purchvered. Bergling, Marion half ported, got away for two long runs, ments60 and one 50 yards, only to be 000 bted down from behind. "Buck" makinplayed a bang-up game for the bushelat end.

leaving okland surprised by its lop-tween win over St. Stephen's, but bushe earned the victiry with some Coat team work. Tom Evans went over for the first touchdown in the opening period with a plunge through the center of the line that gained 20 yards. The score followed a sustained drive from Brookland territory immediately following the opening kick-off.

Sision Adds Pair of Touchdowns.

The eventual winners sent Sision sprawling over the line for the next two scores after long marches from beyond midfield. The West-enders tallied after blocking a kick on Brookland's 5-yard line. An off-side penalty put the ball on the 1-yard mark, from where Zumbo crashed through center for the score. Warren's 10-yard gallop after taking a pass from Evans accounted for Brookland's final touchdown.

"Berry" Dunsford, diminutive Del Ray quarter back, won the ball game for his team by knifing his way through tackle, reversing his field and hiking 65 yards for the only touchdown of the game. The run carried the ball to the Griffs' 6-yard line. The latter three times thwarted the line plunges of their opponents, but the fourth try, with "Hardy" Gensmer carrying the oval, was successful.

The Blue Coals opened up with a productive forward passing attack in the final period that brought the ball to Del Ray's 20-yard line. They were held for downs, however, and Gensmer booted a 60-yard punt to put his team out of danger.

Three 150-Pound Elevens Are Tied for Leadership

FATE, and a strong Brentwood Hawks team, joined forces to produce a triple tie, involving the Palace, Centennial and Brookland clubs in the 150-pound division of The Post's Capital City League, yesterday. The Hawks held the champion Centennials to a 6-6 tie, as Palace bested the Northern Preps, 6-0, in a gruelling struggle, and Brookland gained a 7-0 edge over the Stantons. The fourth game in this division resulted in a 6-0 victory for the plucky Meridian eleven over the Petworth Pennants.

Palace, unbeaten and untied in league competition this year, bowled over its fourth straight opponent as it downed the Northerns yesterday. It was a bitter struggle while it lasted, and both clubs acquitted themselves honorably with a hard, clean brand of play.

Northerns Hold on 4-Yard Line.

Joe Hudson, former St. John's Prep star, plunged over for the winning marker in the second period after the Southwest aggregation had advanced to the 2-yard line on an interrupted march from midfield. Just before the half terminated, Joe Perron's gang battled its way to the 4-yard line with four downs to go. The Northerns rallied, however, and held their opponents at bay until the half-time whistle came to their aid.

The remainder of the game was played from midfield and in the Preps' territory. Despite the fact that it could not score again, Palace always had a slight edge over its ancient rival. In addition to Hudson, Johnny Scanlon, Jim Dearborn, Hurley and Schriver performed well for the winners. Al Marks, Streets and Jordan played best for the Northerns. Jordan was injured on the final play of the first half and was removed to the hospital. He is thought to have suffered a broken collarbone.

Holt's 70-yard gallop, after intercepting a lateral pass, gave the Brentwood Hawks a six-point margin over the Centennials, a margin that loomed larger and larger as the game progressed. The champions found their path blocked at every turn by determined Hawk players, but they finally managed to knot the count with only three minutes to go in the final quarter.

Juliano Dashes 20 Yards For Score.

The score was the result of a punt to the Hawks' 20-yard line. Brentwood lost the ball on downs, and two plays later Juliano circled end for 20 yards and the score. Fellner missed the Hawks' try for point and, not to be outdone, Dan Histon, Centennial end, duplicated the feat.

Watson, full back of the Meridian Team, led his mates to victory over the Petworth Pennants with a romp of 65 yards around left end to the goal. He was given perfect interference by his team. Following this play, which occurred in the first quarter, the Meridians settled down to the serious business of protecting their slim lead. Kemper, at guard, and Vincent Scafide, half back, were bulwarks on the defense for their team. The Pennants exhibited a smoother functioning team than has represented them in the past few weeks. Their good work did not go unrewarded, undisputed possession of the cellar position going to them.

Lou Franke again starred for Brookland as the team turned back a revamped Stanton eleven. Franke plunged over for the lone touchdown, but not before a series of thrilling plays had brought the ball to the Stantons' 1-yard line in Brookland's possession. McNally inaugurated the fireworks by grabbing a Stanton pass on the latter's 40-yard line and running it back to the 4-yard stripe before being brought down by George Lassise. Four line plunges netted Brookland a 6-yard loss and the Stantons took the ball. Again McNally snared a Stanton pass and this time got back to the 25-yard line before being stopped. He then hurled a pass to Luebkert; he gained the 1-yard mark, from where Franke carried it over.

Lyon Park Gridmen Nose Out Pirates, 6-0

Special to The Washington Post.

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 8.—A break in the waning moments of the battle gave Lyon Park Lions a 6-to-0 triumph over the Pirate A. C., of this city, on the Washington and Lee High School gridiron at Ballston this afternoon after they had been outplayed a greater part of the battle by the losers.

The hosts scored in the fourth quarter after recovering a fumbled punt on the Pirates' 5-yard line. The locals held for three downs, but V. Clements crashed through guard for a touchdown on the fourth attempt.

LARRY GAINS WINS.

London, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Larry Gains, Toronto Negro, floored Alexander Lutz, Hungarian heavyweight, five times for varying counts tonight before the referee halted the carnage in the second round of a fifteen-round bout and declared Gains the winner on a technical knockout. Gains holds the British Empire heavyweight championship.

LITTLE "CENTS" WIN.

The Centennial 125-pound football team drubbed the Capital Hill eleven yesterday by a score of 20-0. Looney, Little and Suit made the winning touchdowns.

ROBINSONS AHEAD.

Robinsons 135-pound eleven took the measure of the Northerns by a 13-6 count in a well-played game yesterday. The winners are seeking more games. Teams interested should call Lincoln 10156.

THE Apache Preps scored a 20-19 victory over the Notre Dame Preps in the 135-pound division of The Post's Capital City League. It was one of the closest and most interesting games to watch witnessed on the sandlots this season. The other game scheduled in this class resulted in a forfeit for the Federals over the Northeast Motors eleven.

The Apaches broke the ice in the first period, Inscoe going over for the score, after his team had recovered a Notre Dame fumble on the 20-yard line. Notre Dame came back in the second quarter and with Connelly carrying the ball rushed over the tying marker.

Two Passes by Brockwell Net Scores.

Two passes, both tossed by Brockwell, resulted in the Little Indians winning scores in the third and fourth periods. The first was a 30-yard heave to Woolard and the second a 10-yard effort received by Whiteley. Connelly again burst through the line in the third period for the Irish's second tally. Carlson went over for the final touchdown of the game, after a series of line plunges and short passes over the line. Failure to convert the point after touchdown, following the final score, cost Notre Dame the victory.

PREP MIDGETS WIN.

The Georgetown Prep Midgets won a 21-to-19 victory over the Sacred Heart Midgets in a wild, free-scoring game played at Garrett Park yesterday. McCann and Mayok, assisted by the good blocking of Spaulding, accounted for the winning scores. McDonald tallied all three of Sacred Heart's touchdowns. Smith also played well for the losers.

MANDELL ON CARPET.

Chicago, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Sammy Mandell, former lightweight champion of the world, must appear before the Illinois State Athletic Commission tomorrow to show cause why his $1,250 purse for boxing Ralph Lenny, Union City, N. J., last Wednesday, should not be forfeited. Mandell was ordered out of the ring after the bout had been declared "no contest."

BUSINESS MEN WIN.

The Hyattsville Business Men's 150-pound team gained a 14-0 decision over the Capital Heights eleven at Hyattsville yesterday. It was the second consecutive win for the Business Men. Moore and Fountleroy went over for the winning markers, and Clark and Owings kicked the points after touchdowns. Capital Heights was outweighed but not outgamed and put up a whale of battle for the losers.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

PREVENTING MALARIA.

SOME of the methods of prevention, used by the United Fruit Co. in controlling malaria, are as follows:

To make a dusting powder, for use in water, to prevent mosquito breeding, mix 1 part sifted road dust with 2 parts dry sawdust. Take 1 part of this mixture and 100 parts paris green. Mix thoroughly.

Another paris green method: 1 part air slaked lime or wood ashes, 2 parts sawdust. Mix well. Take 1 part paris green, 100 parts of the dust mixture. Mix well.

In certain places, oil is used rather than paris green. The oil used is crude petroleum, thinned with motor distillate.

Insofar as is possible, the men and their families stay in screened rooms. The screens should be of 18 mesh screening, and they should be properly fitted in and kept in order.

As a mosquito spray, they use carbon tetrachloride or petroleum. Some of the commercial preparations may be used.

In the work of finding and treating cases of malaria, they use dispensers, as well as hospitals, and dispensaries. Their foremen are keenly alive to the need of malaria control, since they have found that if the malaria rate is kept below 5, they can dispense with a 25 per cent of labor reserve, which they must otherwise have available.

When a man is sick on the job or fails to show up for work, the fact is reported to the dispenser, who hunts up the man, takes his temperature and looks him over. It has been found by experience that the laborer can not be depended on to initiate treatment. If the dispenser judges it to be a case of malaria, but not a hospital case, he gives salts, quinine and plasmochin compound then and there. He gives the medicine himself. Then he calls back periodically to see that the treatment is not being neglected. The company depends on quinine and plasmochin compound, and they see to it that both are given as a matter of routine by this dispenser.

If the malaria situation is very bad—if more than 30 per cent of the labor force is found infected—the company gives what they call the blanket treatment. In this treatment every employe, sick and well, is given one tablet of plasmochin compound daily and ten grains of quinine twice daily for six days. Then follows an interval of two weeks. After that the entire force is inspected, and every person found with any evidence of malaria is given ten grains of quinine twice daily and one plasmochin compound tablet daily for six days. It has been found that the first round of the blanket treatment eliminates 80 per cent of the malaria. The second removes the remaining 20 per cent.

This company depends on plasmochin compound to prevent the disease from spreading.

RINGWORM OF TOENAILS.

L. H. writes: I have had ringworm of the toenails for several months. I have had several treatments and am no better. What can I do?

REPLY.

I am not surprised at your lack of success. Curing ringworm of the nail is not easy.

If you are certain that is your trouble, proceed as follows: Scrape the nail until it is thin. Sandpaper, sandstone, soap and warm water will help you in that. Carefully cut away all thick skin. Then paint repeatedly with Castellani's carbol fuchsin paint, or with 1 per cent crystol.

ACIDOSIS.

I. R. R. writes:

1. What is acidosis?

2. Does it make the patient feel queer for a few days before being taken down with it?

REPLY.

1. A condition of intoxication caused either by too much of certain fatty acids, or by a disturbance away from the alkali side of the normal acid-alkali balance.

2. It is likely to do so.

Sheriff Can't Find Sale For Huge Lake Boat

St. Catharines, Ontario (U.P.).—Nobody wants the S. S. Brockville.

This Great Lakes freighter, valued at many thousands of dollars, was seized by the sheriff when owners couldn't meet the crew's back wages.

The sheriff announced an auction. Nobody came but second-hand junk dealers. They did the magnificent sum of $475. Disgusted, the sheriff called the sale off.

SILVER AND WHEAT AGAIN IN SPOTLIGHT

Most of Other Commodities Under Prices of 1930 Reflect Advance.

New York, Nov. 8 (A.P.).—Silver and wheat, stellar performers in many market dramas, have again taken the spotlight on the commodity stage during the past week and inspired sanguine hopes that they may be able to show the way to better times.

Most of the other commodities, although considerably under their price range of a year ago, also apparently reflected the growing optimistic sentiments, and their average quotations for the past week were up over the previous seven days.

Some of the bulls, and their number seemed to be growing, are basing their hopes of future fair weather stock market days on the action of silver and the grains. Some old traders claim that "as go silver and wheat, so goes the market."

Silver Tops 34 Cents.

Silver closed weak at 34⅜ cents an ounce, the highest price for 1931 and an ascent from the low of all time last February of 25¾ cents an ounce. May wheat, down to 40 some odd cents per bushel only a few weeks ago, closed a gala week of booming prices at 71⅞ cents a bushel, and operators on the long side are loudly proclaiming 80-cent wheat before the upswing is halted.

The silver bulls, supposedly led by the wily Chinese, took a firm grip on the market and the bears, from London to Bombay, including such important way points as New York, Shanghai and Hongkong, were chased to their holes. Enthusiastic silverites see the metal hitting the 50-cent mark before many days. But there are sober traders who believe that a reaction is coming soon, both to silver and wheat.

The meteoric movement of wheat prices in America tended somewhat to obscure the rising silver quotations. But the movement of the metal was watched closely because of the experience of many, who have observed markets, both good and bad, for many years. In the past, it is claimed, the action of silver has often forecast the general trend of the market several months ahead.

Wheat Surplus Shrinking.

While the upturn in wheat quotations seems somewhat mysterious and "suspicious" to some, the movement has its optimistic analyst who cite a drop in world production of some 20 per cent bad crops in Russia and Argentina and a sudden public realization that surplus stocks can not last always if their replenishment slows down.

Foreign countries, viewing the situation somewhat nervously, have already come into the market for the purchase of futures, and it was reported that three European governments recently bought some 47,000,000 bushels from the Farm Board, making a total of about 75,000,000 bushels that have been disposed of, leaving the board's holdings at between 125,000,000 and 150,000,000 bushels.

Considering that the board once had around 250,000,000 bushels on its hands, this is considered a genuine reduction.

Russia Important Factor.

The Russian wheat situation has also been an important factor in the soaring prices. All sorts of reports and rumors, all in favor of the bulls, have come out of the land of the Bolsheviks. It appears to be a fact that the Russian wheat crop is 10,000,000 bushels, at least, under that of last year. In addition, it has been reported that the Soviets, facing a shortage, have been forced to buy in outside markets to fill their contracts.

Americans who have only recently come out of Russia, however, say that country has plenty of wheat now and there is no reason why next year's crop should not be a large one. They say that the wheat export troubles of the Soviets is not with the size of their crops, but the difficulty the government has been experiencing in collecting the grain from its great collective farms and individual peasant farmers.

The Soviet government contracts ahead with the collectives and peasants for its share of the wheat crops. It has been paying in roubles. The collectives and peasants have been willing to accept this paper money—good only in Russia—but they have demanded that the government provide goods and supplies that they can purchase with the roubles. The government, it is said, has failed in everything except providing the paper money. Consequently, notwithstanding threats and coercion, the farmers have been refusing to give up their grain and the government has been left holding the bag.

Sanity Judges Scored By Speaker at Forum

Officials who send people to insane asylums are sometimes more defective than citizens committed to confinement by their orders, it was asserted last night by John A. Savage in a lecture on "Who Are the Real Insane?" before the Washington Open Forum at 1766 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Savage is president of the American Equity Association as well as a vice president of the forum. President Linn A. E. Gale of the forum was chairman of the meeting.

Describing various instances of litigation in which he waged fights for release of inmates of asylums who were not, in his judgment, properly confined, Savage maintained that designing persons frequently have people locked up in order to get possession of their property. He severely criticized the management of St. Elizabeths.

Steel Production Rises 2 Points

Bookings Are Appreciably Heavier and Sentiment Is Much Better.

Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 8.—(A.P.).—Steel production rose more than 2 points, to 30 to 31 per cent last week, bookings were appreciably heavier and sentiment has been lifted further by improvement in agriculture, oil and industries, says the magazine Steel in its weekly review.

The production percentage is the highest since September 24. The magazine says the gain will be held this week. While December probably will show a seasonable let down, January is expected to close the gap.

Improvement in bookings developed without tangible support from the automobile industry, despite slight easing in structural steel awards and with improved demand from expanding farm and oil country purchasing power, assured but not yet realized.

KILBOURNE

4 POLICEMEN FACE JURY THIS MORNING IN BRUTALITY CASE

Beating of James H. Harker Laid to Men to Be Tried in District Court.

PROSECUTION TO OFFER LIST OF 35 WITNESSES

Photographs Expected to Be Shown; Defense Hints at Surprise Testimony.

The trials of eighteen policemen, indicted on various assault charges, as the result of the investigation of alleged "third degree" methods in the Police Department, will begin today when four policemen of the First Precinct face trial for the alleged beating of James Henry Harker, 24 years old.

Because of the manifold angles to the trial, it is expected that the jury will listen to prosecution and defence witnesses until Friday. Surprise testimony, which has been assiduously gathered by the defense in the past three weeks is expected to be introduced.

Those who will face a jury today in the District Supreme Court are Precinct Detective James Mostyn and Policemen William C. Burroughs, William Laflin and W. C. Grooms, all of whom are accused of having beaten Harker on August 22 while he was being held in connection with the robbery of the P. O. Visible Lunch at 727 North Capitol street.

35 Prosecution Witnesses.

Some difficulty is expected in the selection of a jury because of the widespread publicity attached to the case. By the noon recess it is expected that the jury will be impaneled. Then a parade of 35 witnesses will present the case of the prosecution to the jury. The Government will likely rest its case before court closes tomorrow.

James A. O'Shea, counsel for all but Burroughs, expects that the defense of his clients will take about three days.

District Attorney Leo A. Rover will offer the Government evidence to the jury. The charges are, substantially, that Harker was beaten with a rubber hose and otherwise ill-treated when questioned at the First Precinct Station in connection with the robbery.

Pictures to Be Shown.

The most important evidence to be surmounted by the defense is the picture of Harker, taken by a Post photographer after he had been released from the precinct. He was beaten, he said, when policemen were trying to extract a confession of the robbery from him.

As a matter of legal strategy, the Harker case is being presented first, because the Government considers this its strongest case. When it has been decided, the weaker cases will be presented by Mr. Rover's assistants in two courts.

'Robbers' Revealed As Friend-Hunters

Knock on Apartment Door Seeking "Charlie;" Men Seized and Freed.

Occupants of Park Central Apartments, Nineteenth and F streets northwest, were treated to the sight of a detail of policemen searching the halls of the building for two purported burglars who turned out to be innocent seekers for the apartment of a friend.

Knocking on the door of an apartment, they stated that "Charlie" had sent them. The door was slammed in their faces and they evidently surmised that they had made a mistake, continuing their quest. Somebody called police, saying "two suspicious characters" were abroad in the apartment.

Policemen arrived and climbed stairs and peered down hallways. Finally they located the two men, who were taken to the Third Precinct station, questioned, and released.

Woman and Man Hurt In Northwest Accident

Two persons were injured in a collision between two automobiles at Seventh and Quincy streets northwest yesterday. Mrs. Elizabeth Quill, 60, of 3545 Warder street northwest, received painful injuries, while Robert Saffren, 35, driver of the car in which she was a passenger, was slightly injured.

Saffren, who lives at 623 Otis street northwest, was driving north on Seventh street, while the other car, operated by Thomas A. Voss, 19, of 604 Quincy street northwest, was going west on Quincy street. Both machines were badly damaged. Fire rescue apparatus rendered first aid. Mrs. Quill was said to have sustained severe shock and numerous bruises about the head and body. No arrests were made.

Bakery Oven Blast Startles Southeast

Sunday Morning Quiet Is Disturbed; Damage Is Placed at $1,500.

A large oven was partially destroyed in a bakery at 2318 Pennsylvania avenue southeast early yesterday in an explosion said to have been caused by a clogged flue. Damage was estimated at $1,200 to the oven and $300 to the building.

Noise of the blast attracted a large crowd. Sunday morning sleep of many persons living nearby was interrupted by the reverberation which brought police and gas company emergency vehicles scurrying.

Several employes of the bakery were in the building at the time of the blast but all escaped injury. A number of windows were broken. The bakery is operated by Clarence R. Chadwell, 1812 A street southeast, and the buildin is owned by Harry Taylor, of the Wardman Park Hotel.

Skyviews of Washington—No. 9

THE area pictured above is one made famous by one who served his country in its two highest positions, those of President and Chief Justice. William Howard Taft lived in the neighborhood, on Wyoming avenue, and his frequent walks across the bridge to be seen in the lower left-hand corner caused the structure to be named for him after having been previously called the Million Dollar Bridge.

At the end of the bridge to the west is 2310 Connecticut avenue and to the west 2311 (out where numbers rather than names are the rule). Swinging behind 2311 may be seen the Valley Vista Apartments. In the center, at the bottom of the photograph may be seen the top of the Maret School and directly to the east of it the Dresden Apartments veering around the corner of Connecticut avenue and Kalorama road.

RITES FOR 5 CAPITAL AIR VICTIMS ARE SET

Burials in as Many States Arranged for Persons Killed in Crashes.

Funeral arrangements for the victims of recent airplane crashes, which, within 48 hours, claimed the lives of five Washingtonians, were announced yesterday.

Accompanied by George Pomeroy, a brother pilot, with whom he planned to fly around the world, the body of Floyd Cox, ace pilot of the Ludington Line, who died when his plane fell at Camden, N. J., last Thursday, was taken to the home of his brother at Hornick, Iowa, where he will be buired this afternoon. Mr. Cox is survived by his wife, Mrs. Evelyn Cox, who, with Mrs. Pomeroy, also accompanied the body to Iowa.

Funeral services for Vernon Lucas, also a Ludington Line pilot, who lost his life in the same crash, will be held this morning at 11 o'clock at the chapel at Fort Myer, Va. He will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

Mr. Lucas, who served as a radio instructor in the Army Air Service in the World War, is survived by his wife, Mrs. Rita Lang Lucas; his mother and four children, Lowell, Anita, Earle and Harold Lucas.

The body of George B. Taylor, director of the laboratory at the Chestnut Farms Dairy, another victim of the crash, was cremated Saturday at Philadelphia. Memorial services were held yesterday in Laws Chapel of the Foundry Methodist Church, Sixteenth and P streets northwest. Surviving him is his wife, Mrs. Rennie H. Taylor.

Services for Elmer Smith, advertising director of the Washington Herald, a fourth victim of the accident, will be held this morning at 9:30 o'clock at the home of his sister, Mrs. Richard F. Sheehan, at Dorchester, Mass. Mass will be said at 10 o'clock in St. Ann's Catholic Church, followed by interment in the church cemetery. Mr. Smith is survived by a wife and child in Boston, Mass.

Preston Paynter, 14 years old, who was killed Saturday when the plane in which he was a passenger crashed at the edge of the Washington-Hoover Airport, will be buried tomorrow in Lewes, Del. Funeral services will be held tonight at 8:30 o'clock at the undertaking establishment of C. J. Ives in Clarendon, Va. The youth, a student at McKinley High School, is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl M. Paynter.

Edward C. Ritchie, test pilot, who crashed to his death Friday when his plane went to pieces in midair and fell near Bolling Field, was buried yesterday in Newport, R. I. Mr. Ritchie made his home in Baltimore with his wife, Mrs. Harriet E. T. Ritchie.

Hands of Man Burned By Fire on Automobile

Ralph Goudy, 25 years old, of 1721 Kenyon street northwest, was burned on the hands yesterday when he tried to extinguish a fire caused by a short circuit on an automobile upon which he was working. The fire took place near his home.

After treatment by the Fire Rescue Squad he was taken to Emergency Hospital.

7,761 Delight in Beauties Of Chrysanthemum Show

750 Varieties Are on View at Greenhouses of Department of Agriculture, Including New Blooms Named for Famous Persons.

"What do you know about chrysanthemums?" demanded the city editor, just like that, right out of a clear sky and with no warning at all.

"Can't you make it roses instead?" the reporter parried.

The reporter eventually arrived at the conclusion that the best way to give a reasonably lucid answer to the city editor's question probably would be to visit the chrysanthemum show, which opened yesterday.

The reporter was not alone. Attendants at the big greenhouses of the Department of Agriculture at Constitution avenue and Fourteenth street, where the show is being held all this week, reported that 7,761 persons of assorted ages, sexes and nationalities had gone down to revel in the riot of color broadcast by the 750 varieties of chrysanthemums on display.

Every variation of color imaginable is revealed in the 170 different varieties of the huge Japanese flowers and the 580 varieties of smaller pompoms.

All the old favorites are there, and many new varieties which the department has developed during the last year, such as the Doctor Boone, a huge bronze-colored posey which the department horticulturists raised from a pup, and the David, a new cream pompom.

Imperial Gold, a magnificent yellow flower, is one of the new ones, and vies in size with the Mary L. Clarke, a huge pinkish specimen, the Golden Champion and the white Admiral Beatty, also new. Another newcomer to the show this year is the "Amos," a white pompom. The reporter searched in vain for the "Andy," although an attendant predicted that there would be an "Andy" in the show next year.

Mrs. Hoover is represented by a beautiful salmon-covered flower, while the President Hoover is—strange as it may seem—a red. A specimen of the Peggy Ann Hoover, a beautiful pinkish bloom, was just beginning to unfold its petals, and the department promises that by tomorrow it will be open in full blossom.

Many of the names almost made the reporter think for a moment that he had wandered into the paddock at Bowie by mistake. There was, for instance, the Dazzler, Smith's Sensation, Friendly Rival, Lady Grace, Nellie, Stella Mae, Honeydew and dozens of others which might just as easily have been copied out of a list of race entries.

President and Mrs. Hoover had been expected to drop in to look over the show yesterday afternoon, but for some reason, probably because the Chief Executive is too engrossed in affairs of state, they did not put in their appearance, to the great disappointment of the show attendants.

The display will be open to the public from 9 o'clock in the morning until 9 each night daily through next Sunday.

C. L. BROCKWAY DIES AS RESULT OF FALL

Widow and Daughter Survive Retired Officer, Victim of Accident.

Charles Leon Brockway, 68 years old, a retired Army officer, died yesterday in Emergency Hospital from a fractured skull received Saturday night when he fell down a flight of stairs at his home, 5332 Fifth street northwest.

Mr. Brockway, who retired from the Army as a lieutenant in 1919 and was a veteran of the Spanish-American and World Wars, received the skull fracture when his head struck the corner of a table at the foot of the stairs.

His wife, Mrs. Myrtle K. Brockway heard a noise and came from another room to find her husband unconscious, with blood flowing from a wound in his head. Dr. John Marion Baker, of 1819 G street, gave him treatment and ordered his removal to Emergency Hospital.

Until last January, he worked at the General Accounting Office.

Besides his widow, Lieut. Brockway is survived by a daughter, Lillian. Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the undertaking establishment of V. L. Speare Co., 1009 H street northwest. Interment will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Gas Overcomes Man.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

GOOD NIGHT, WINE NURSE!

THE "What-I-s-Home-Without-A-Fermenting-Plant?" movement has been struck another blow. Following a Federal Court decision, the California fruit interests have decided to cease cooperating in the work of filling the American home with curious gases, pretty bubbles and assorted odors.

• • • •

If the decision is on the level it marks the end of a cooperative wine producing movement that had been laughing up Mr. Volstead's sleeves for years. It was nothing less than the perfect plan for making wine under fool-proof conditions in any bungalow.

• • • •

The buyer practically got his wines out of a trick hat. All he did was to phone the corporation and announce his wine capacity over a given period. The company delivered the keg of fruit juice all set for fermentation.

• • • •

It rigged up all the necessary appliances and gadgets and instructed the buyer to let nature take its course and trust everything else to the company "wine nurse." If the bubbles got too boisterous the buyer merely phoned a telephone number carefully placed on every keg. The telephone call brought the "wine nurse" to look at the product, do whatever was necessary and give assurances to the family that there was positively no danger of the keg blowing out the east wall of the kitchen.

• • • •

At the end of eight weeks the "wine nurse" came up, propounced the wine full of the necessary dynamite, gave the buyer a few convincing samples and then proceeded to siphon it off, bottle it and cork it up for the long winter evenings. This done, he cleaned everything up and removed the keg and the paraphernalia, wishing the family many happy returns and leaving his telephone number in case the folks wanted an encore.

• • • •

The purchaser never had to lift a finger or hold a funnel. The juice was "serviced" by the grape-growing corporation from start to finish. If the buyer was a bachelor, the company would even send up a man to drink with him.

• • • •

Its purpose was the glorification of the American wine bubble with the minimum amount of home work, and it was going great when the Kansas Federal court ruled that the practice was very smooth and very pretty, but punishable under the law.

• • • •

The Court held that the company sold the fruit juices and serviced the fermenting gah-gah with the intent to produce genuine wine. The company knew this and the American public knew it, but it was the first time that the courts seemed to grasp the idea.

• • • •

FROM now on the corporation will dispose of its fruit juices through grocery and drug stores and will discontinue the "wine nurse" idea. After a consumer buys a keg of the stuff he will have to do his own servicing.

The juice will turn into wine over a given period just as it always did. The only difference will be that the consumer will have to furnish his own gadgets and do his own worrying.

Maryland Man Offers Dog To Guide Blind Salesman

No dogs of the right kind trotted into the apartment of John F. Davis, at 914 New York avenue northwest, yesterday in answer to the story in The Post asking for a four-footed friend to guide this blind man about the streets and offices of Washington so that he can earn his living as a salesman.

However, one man came all the way from Huntsville, Md., to tell Mr. Davis he had a setter-police dog he would be glad to give him, but Mr. Davis wants a thoroughbred German shepherd, preferably white, to take the place of the one he says was poisoned last July.

He could get one of these dogs at an institution in Morristown, N. J., but it would involve staying at the place three weeks to be trained, as well as the cost of the animal, the blind salesman said. Mr. Davis, a well-known figure in Washington, now finds it impossible to ply his wares because of the danger of crossing streets alone. He says the new left-hand turn has heightened this danger.

9,292 GO ON BOARD 'OLD IRONSIDES' IN SUNDAY INSPECTION

Frigate Constitution Draws Big Crowd at Navy Yard Mooring Place.

FAMOUS MAN O' WAR TIED UP INDEFINITELY

Visitors May See Old Ship's Armaments Every Day From 10 to 4:30.

Lure of the glorious American sea-fighting tradition, which envelopes "Old Ironsides" from masthead to keel and from stem to stern, drew 9,292 visitors aboard her decks at the Navy Yard yesterday.

"Old Ironsides," the United States frigate Constitution, undefeated in 42 battles, was on exhibition to Washingtonians from 10 o'clock until 4:30 yesterday. She arrived Saturday to tie up at the yard indefinitely, after a summer cruise along the eastern seaboard, during which 850,000 persons visited her.

Just as she was when the Barbary pirates and the British were humbled by her booming broadsides, the visitor to her decks is overcome with awe and reverence for the glory she represents.

Size Is First Impression.

The first impression of the person who sees the Constitution is of her immensity. While in reality small when compared with a modern ship, her masts tower 187 feet above the water and her broad spars which carry more than an acre of canvas, create the conception of great size.

The yawning muzzles of 52 guns attest a powerful armament which does not suffer by comparison with that of a dreadnaught.

Visitors Admitted Daily.

Originally manned by a crew of 475, the Constitution now carries a crew of 7 officers and 80 sailors and marines. Commander L. J. Gulliver commands the decks where trod such immortal heroes as Nicholson, Hull, Bainbridge and Stewart.

Below decks, the guest is shown the old staterooms, the brig with its leg irons and shackles, operating chairs, showcases with rare display of antiques, powder horns and buckets, cutlasses, muskets and all the other accoutrements of the man-o'-war of long ago.

The old ship will remain on exhibition indefinitely, persons being admitted aboard from 10 until 4:30 each day.

Hit-Run Driver's Victim Is in Serious Condition

As a result of injuries received Friday night when struck by a hit-and-run driver, Mrs. Daisy Felsinger, 40 years old, is in Casualty Hospital in a serious condition. Mrs. Felsinger told police that she was struck by the automobile at Fourth and I streets northeast, as she was walking toward her home at 644 I street northeast.

The woman was treated at first for her injuries by her family physician. Yesterday, however, her condition made it necessary for her removal to the hospital. She was said by physicians to have a possible fracture of the pelvis and numerous contusions to the body and limbs.

Rescue Squad Revives Woman, Victim of Gas

Mrs. Margaret Lindgren, 65 years old, was found unconscious from the effects of illuminating gas in the basement of her home at 842 Jefferson street northwest, yesterday afternoon, by her grandson, William Branson.

Bodies of 2 Victims Of Gas Sent South

Asheville Masonic Lodge Will Bury Huigill and His Son.

The bodies of Homer Huigill and his son Hugh, who were found unconscious in a tourist camp cabin more than a week ago and succumbed to escaping gas in the cabin despite blood transfusions administered in attempt to save their lives, were removed yesterday to Asheville, N. C., for burial, by Reuben Barnitz, master of a Masonic lodge of which Huigill was a member.

The two men, who came to Washington in search of work, had no relatives, and a local Masonic lodge had the bodies prepared at the funeral parlors of Almus R. Speare while communicating with the lodge in Asheville.

The younger Huigill was not a Mason, but the organization has volunteered to arrange the interment of both men. Mount Hermon Lodge, No. 118, is the organization in which the elder Huigill was a member.

Police Asked to Search For 60-Year-Old Man

Police have been asked to search for Henry D. Kruck, 60 years old, who has been missing since November 1 from his home at 3608 Rock Creek Church road northwest.

He is five feet in height, weighs 115 pounds, and when last seen was wearing a brown overcoat, brown felt hat, dark blue shirt and brown vest.

DR. SIZOO DESCRIBES CIVILIZATION'S PERIL

Pastor Says Germany Fell Because It Had False Foundations.

"The front page of an American paper gives more publicity daily to the fallen Hohenzollerns than all the papers in Germany," declared the Rev. Joseph R. Sizoo at the New York Avenue Church last night, talking on "Germany Today."

Dr. Sizoo pointed out that civilizations fall because they do not have strong foundations and that although they may construct imposing superstructures, this is not enough to assure their permanence. To illustrate his point the preacher described the culture, wealth, power and loyalty of Rome, Greece, Egypt and other fallen peoples.

Turning to a consideration of Germany, he said: "Likewise Germany did not fall because she was lacking in loyalty, education facilities, culture or manpower. She fell because the foundation of Prussianism and the spirit of the Hohenzollerns on which she was founded was false and inadequate and not firm."

Three Crises of Germany.

Dr. Sizoo traced the founding of the German republic and described three crises through which it passed. The first he said was the murder of an outstanding financial and economic leader who might have been able to point the way out for Germany.

The second was a financial crisis in which the money standards of the country dropped out of sight.

The third was described as a current political crisis brought about by the present lack of confidence in the government and the leaders of the country.

"There is a spirit of cut-throat philosophy prevailing," Dr. Sizoo said, "with 40 parties interested only in their political welfare and not in any spirit of national unity."

The speaker pointed out that the economic situation is such in Germany that at the present time it is necessary to pay 20 per cent interest rates on borrowed money, and that 15 per cent of the Germans are unemployed, while latest figures in the United States shows 3 per cent out of work.

Christ Called Only Hope.

He told of a young executive with whom he had come in contact who apparently had an important position, but whose wage was the equivalent of $40 a month.

"At the present time in Germany 90 per cent of the cattle have tuberculosis," he said.

In drawing his conclusions, Dr. Sizoo said "the message of Germany to America today is that, after all, the principles of Jesus Christ not only must prevail, but shall and will prevail."

"The world is so bound up and interwoven that all portions of it directly affect each other. In good will and understanding of Jesus lies the hope of the world," he concluded.

Traffic Is Clogged On Highway Bridge

3 Hours Required for Extra Detail of Police to Break Up Bad Jam.

It took the combined efforts of a lieutenant, a sergeant and a private of the Park Police, supplementing the regular Arlington County police force and a detail of District policemen, more than three hours last night to straighten out what is described as the most intricate traffic snarl seen at the Highway Bridge in years.

No estimate was made of the number of cars inolved which was declared to rival the famous Sunday afternoon congestion of Merrick road, Long Island, but by dusk last night the automobiles returning to Washington from Virginia points were backed up for 2 miles along the three roads which converge at the bridge.

At 4 o'clock, Lieut. Henry Helms, Sergt. William Shelton, and Policeman Paul Toland, of the Park Police, were called to aid in disentangling the lines of cars, and it was 7 o'clock before they were able to get traffic flowing freely again.

EVANGELIST HOLDS DEPRESSION SENDS PEOPLE TO CHURCH

CHICAGOAN IS SPEAKER IN GOSPEL TABERNACLE

Poverty Named as First of Garments Christians Should Wear.

"While the success and expansion of 1929 carried people away from the Lord, the depression has driven them back to the word of God," said Evangelist Ben Hardin of Chicago, speaking yesterday morning at the Full Gospel Tabernacle, North Capitol and K streets.

The evangelist preached on "The Adornment of the Church," his text being drawn from the fifteenth verse of the second chapter of the Book of Esther.

"The church began in poverty but now is one of the richest institutions in the world, but in our marble halls we have gotten away from the power of the gospel," he continued.

The evangelist took a biblical example from the story of Esther and King Ahasuerus, of Persia and Media. The king had all the maidens of his country pass before him so that he might choose a queen. In order that they might appear as attractive as possible he had his servants offer every aid to beauty to each of them.

Poverty Is Called Garment.

But, according to the Scripture "When the turn of Esther came she required nothing but what Hegai, the king's chamberlain, appointed, and Esther obtained favor in the sight of all them that looked upon her."

The evangelist then drew a parallel between the relationship of Hegai and Esther—and God and man, saying that, "in like manner should man be appointed as God sees fit. We should be willing to wear the garment that the Lord appoints for us," he continued.

Mr. Hardin enumerated some of the God-given garments in which man may clothe himself.

"Let us first consider poverty," he said. "This garment can be best illustrated by the story of Peter and the lame man on the steps of the temple. The man begged for gold from Peter, but the Apostle replied, 'Silver and gold have I none, but what I have I give unto thee.' And with this he healed the man's affliction. Though in poverty, he had a great healing power which he administered to the needy.

Sacrifices Are Cited.

"In like manner, though we are in poverty, we should have the quality Peter displayed when he said, 'Such as I have I give unto you,'" the evangelist said.

"Many are called upon to wear the garments of poverty and we should be willing to wear what the Lord appoints for us," he went on.

Another garment considered by the evangelist was that of sacrifice. "Unfortunately in many churches today there is a small group of the wealthy paying the greater part of the bills and without whom the church could not exist, while the mixed multitude follows, accepting the blessings of the church but shirking its responsibilities," he explained.

Considering obscurity, the evangelist said, "Some of the greatest characters in the word of God go down on its pages unnamed, simply designated by a personal pronoun.

Biblical Heroes Nameless.

"At the end of Jesus' period of temptation in the wilderness we read, 'Angels came and ministered unto Him.' How great was their commission and yet we do not know their names. Again a boy gave his food so that it might be blessed by the Lord and used to feed thousands of people. Again we are not told who he was."

The last garment considered was that of suffering. Speaking of this Mr. Hardin said, "Suffering develops a beauty of Christian character which we do not find in other places. Sweetness of character is often found in those who have been sick and have suffered for a long period of time."

"We would do well to study carefully these garments and, like Esther, be satisfied to wear what is appointed for us," the evangelist concluded.

From Washington Mr. Hardin will go to Elizabeth, N. J., and from there to New Kensington, Pa. After the first of the year he will move to Washington from Chicago.

Girl, 6, Hurt as Car Leaps Sidewalk Following Crash

Two automobiles were badly damaged and a 6-year-old girl injured yesterday afternoon in an accident which ended with one of the cars involved careening across a sidewalk, crashing through a hedge and coming to a standstill at the front door of the home of George Gentner, 1374 G street southeast.

The machines involved were driven by James Kelly, 36, 136 F street southeast, and Evelyn Morse, 22 years old, 1640 B street southeast. The former was driving north on Fourteenth street southeast, while Miss Morse was operating her machine west on G street, and at the intersection of the two streets the cars came together.

Kelly lost control of his machine, he said, and before he could regain control the car had taken its unconventional lurch to the Gentner doorsill. His 6-year-old daughter, Katherine, was cut by flying glass and bruised by the shock of the impact.

A passing machine took the child to the Navy Yard Dispensary, where she was treated for her injuries and later sent home. No arrests were made as a result of the accident.
